Service Law Advocates Counting on Popular Will

'People's Bill' Not To Be Crammed Down Anybody's Throat, Austin Says

By Robert C. Albright

Congressional sponsors of the President's "win the war" national service program last night counted on a delayed reaction from the country to tilt the legislative balance in favor of total mobilization.

"This is a people's bill, or it is nothing at all," Senator Warren R. Austin (Republican) of Vermont, leading Senate advocate of national service, told The Post last night.

"We'll not cram it down anybody's throat. It must represent the spontaneously patriotic desire of a great people to volunteer all they've got to see this war through to a victorious finish."

To Reflect Popular Will

The Vermont Republicans promised to call nonmilitary nongovernmental witnesses "from the country" before extended hearings of the Senate Military Committee to reflect "the popular will to serve" and at least one military witness to demonstrate "need."

As the legislation was formally launched at Senate Military Committee hearings, with Austin as the first witness, there were these other developments:

1. Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson, in an interview, predicted national service legislation would stabilize labor in critical industries and provide a definite morale boost for troops overseas. He said "there would be little compulsion" of labor.

2. War Manpower Chief Paul V. McNutt, on the first leg of a previously scheduled Nation-wide speaking trip, advised industry in French Lick, Ind., last night "not to sit back" and think national service legislation "will solve your problems for you—a law can help only those who help themselves."

3. AFL President William Green and CIO President Philip Murray conferred with President Roosevelt for an hour and three-quarters yesterday afternoon. As they left the White House, they commented to reporters only that they had not abandoned their opposition to National Service legislation.

4. While Murray in a statement Tuesday had branded the proposal as "quack medicine," Green followed with a statement early yesterday that the AFL "resolutely opposes" national service legislation, contending (1) it will not prevent strikes, (2) it will not solve manpower problems and (3) "it threatens to undermine our basic concepts of democracy."

Meanwhile, it was learned that Manpower Chief McNutt, who on the eve of the message had advised the President against recommending national service legislation, had decided to accept the decision of his commander in chief.

McNutt's first full-dress statement on his national service views is expected in a speech at Louisville, Ky., tonight. The WMC chairman is known to feel national service legislation should incorporate the following principles:

Cooperation between labor and management should underlie administration.

The employer's freedom to select the worker he chooses, the Committee Tax Plans Approved

By Samuel W. Bell
New York Tribune, Inc.

The Senate placed its stamp of approval yesterday on virtually all the rate changes and increases in its Finance Committee's version of $2,275,600,000 tax bill, showing no disposition to heed President Roosevelt's latest request for additional taxes as set forth in his state-of-the-Union message submitted to Congress yesterday.

Mr. Roosevelt's demand for a "realistic" approach to taxation, interpreted in congressional quarters as meaning only the Administration's rejected $10,500,000,000 revenue program, was not mentioned during the Senate's 4-hour march through the 190-page tax bill yesterday, except in one caustic reference by Senator Walter F. George (Democrat) of Georgia, chairman of the Finance Committee.

"I think we should realize that a personal income tax, ranging from 19 per cent to 90 per cent, a corporation tax of 40 per cent, and an excess profits tax of 95 per cent, is realistic tax law, which will reduce the ultimate cost of the war to our sons and daugh-

Baruch Sought For Warplane Labor Analysis

By Frank Kelley
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Bernard M. Baruch, special adviser to James F. Byrnes, Director of War Mobilization, has been asked by Government authorities concerned with aircraft production to survey the manpower situation affecting warplane output throughout the Nation, it was learned yesterday.

Mr. Baruch, aided by John Hancock of his staff, drew up the West Coast aircraft manpower plan of labor and production priorities put in effect last summer by Byrnes to cure production lags that cost the Allies hundreds of planes.

Although 85,946 aircraft of all types were produced in 1943, the record was "still not as good as it ought to be," in the opinion of military officials who have appealed to Mr. Baruch to take over again as "doctor" on manpower ills. Whether the 73-year-old elder statesman will accept the task depends on his ability to complete soon his current study for Mr. Byrnes on contract termination and reconversion of industry.

Officials had confidently expected that production would reach 9000 planes in November and soar above that mark last month. Actually, 8789 machines were turned out in November and 8802 in December, creating fear among officials that production was tending to get onto the same sort of "plateau" from which it had to be lifted last summer with Mr. Baruch's aid.

His West Coast plan—later adopted for labor shortage areas in central Connecticut, Buffalo, and other points—contains all the elements of national service legislation proposed to Congress yesterday by President Roosevelt.

Jett Nominated For FCC Member

Ewell K. Jett, chief engineer of the Federal Communications Commission, was nominated yesterday by President Roosevelt to be a member of the FCC for a 7-year term.

Jett will take the position left vacant when the renomination of Commissioner George Henry Payne was withdrawn without explanation two days after it had been sent to the Senate last July.

Foe's Counterblows Futile

New Red Drive Tears 19-Mile Gap in Nazi Line; Sarny Taken

London, (Thursday), Jan. 13 (AP). In three separate actions, the Russians have opened a new offensive in the Mozyr sector of White Russia, captured the railway bastion of Sarny, 35 miles inside old Poland, and fought off a frantic German counterattack near the Ukrainian Bug River, Moscow announced today.

More than 5000 Germans were killed and 144 Nazi tanks wrecked in the last 24 hours, said the Moscow communique.

The new offensive near Mozyr tore a 19-mile gap through elaborate German defense lines, and in two days the Russians advanced up to nine miles, capturing more than 30 towns and hamlets. Among them were Davidovichi, 24 miles north of Mozyr on the railway to Zhlobin, and Kozlovichi, two miles west of the railway which had long been cut by the Russians. The fighting was south of the Berezina River and about 75 miles from the old Polish frontier.

The Germans fought violently to hold their positions with many futile counterattacks.

Sarny, a major objective within old Poland and 130 miles southwest of the Mozyr area, was captured by Gen. Nikolai Vatutin's First Ukrainian Army in flanking move which took the town from the rear, routing the German garrison.

Russian forces in this area also advanced to take Domprovitsa, a district center 20 miles north of Sarny. This gave the Russians a 26-mile front in old Poland. This front was astride the Vilna-Rovno railway thus forcing the Germans to depend on the line 135 miles farther back at Brest-Litovsk for their next north-south communi-

Five Convicted In Anaconda Bad-Wire Plot

Providence, R. I., Jan. 12 (AP).—The Pawtucket plant of the Anaconda Wire & Cable Co. and four plant officials were found guilty by a Federal grand jury tonight of charges that they conspired to manufacture and deliver defective wire to the Army Signal Corps.

Besides the corporaton, those found guilty were:

William H. Morley, former manager of the Pawtucket plant and now assistant general manager for the parent company in Providence; Jacob Eagleson, manager and former superintendent at the Pawtucket plant; Lowell K. Morrow, chief inspector and chemist at the plant, and William Eagleson, brother of Jacob and senior employe in the water test room at Pawtucket.

Bail Is Refused

Judge John P. Hartigan continued the cases for sentence until 10 o'clock next Tuesday morning and refused the defendants bail.

The jury's blanket verdict of guilty was returned after a few hours' deliberation and a half-hour later the four men were on their way back to the Providence County jail.

The conspiracy was alleged to have taken place between November 1, 1940, and September 1, 1942.

[The Anaconda Wire & Cable Co., two of its officers and three employes last June at Fort Wayne, Ind., pleaded nolo contendere to charges of a five million dollar war fraud against the Government in the manufacture of defective communications wire for the armed services and were fined a total of $31,100. Prison sentences imposed on the two officers, Thor S. Johnson, general manager of all the company's mills, and Frank E. Hart, manager of the Marion, Ind., mill were suspended by Federal Judge Thomas W. Slick, who since has retired from the bench. The judge said that the men already had suffered from the publicity given the case and he held that the war effort would be better served by leaving them in their positions.—Editor's note.]

'Aid-to-Enemy' Charge Names Chase Bank

By the Associated Press

A Federal grand jury in New York returned two indictments yesterday charging the Chase National Bank and Leonard J. A. Smit, dealer in industrial diamonds, with "conspiring and engaging in" the illegal sale and export of industrial diamonds in violation of the Trading With the Enemy Act, Attorney General Biddle announced.

Other defendants indicted on the same charge include two corporations controlled by Smit, Anton Smit & Co., Inc., and Elfantum, Inc.

Biddle said the indictments, together with five others returned by the same grand jury December 20, 1943, but made public for the first time yesterday, collectively charge that Leonard Smit and his various companies, through the assistance of the Chase National Bank, "contrived by illegal means to trade in industrial diamonds in contravention of various wartime laws freezing the funds of certain foreign nationals and prohibiting the export of certain strategic materials."

Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the board of the Chase National Bank, informed of the indictment, said it "simply makes no sense."

"All the acts complained of happened before Pearl Harbor and, therefore, before the United States entered the war," he said.

"The Chase National Bank, like all the other large banks, had many thousands of transactions which involved the interpretation of the foreign exchange relations. In carrying them out, we were acting in the closest cooperation with the public

Marine Cannon Smashes Foe's Effort to Land Reinforcements

Marshalls Raided

Stone Wall

Allied Headquarters, New Guinea (Thursday), Jan. 13 (AP).—American Marine artillery smashed a Japanese night attempt to land reinforcements at Borgen Bay, near the Marines' invasion beachhead at Cape Gloucester, New Britian.

The sinking of two troop-filled barges was reported in Gen. Douglas MacArthur's communique today. It also said that the Marines were maintaining steady pressure in the Borgen Bay sector, where fighting has been heavy around Hill 660.

A headquarter's spokesman said the Marines were advancing slowly, aided by attack planes.

He said that 300 more Japanese bodies had been found, bringing the total enemy dead to more than 2400, compared with around 400 Marine dead and wounded since the Americans landed.

Australians Gain

Australian jungle fighters have made another advance, this time 3 miles, along the coast of the Huon Peninsula in New Guinea, and the Japanese apparently are attempting to evacuate troops threatened with entrapment between the fast-moving Aussies and American invasion troops at Saidor, less than 60 miles to the northwest.

Increased enemy barge traffic along the coast from Saidor to Sio, to the south, has been reported, and these craft have been hard hit by day air strafing and night PT patrol boat attacks. Forty-three of the barges, many of them loaded with troops, were sunk or destroyed Monday and Tuesday.

The Australians have reached the banks of the Dapugara River. They soon will have the Huon Peninsula cleared of Japanese, at their present rate of progress.

Madang Alexishafen Bombed

Madang and Alexishafen, airdrome centers northwest of Saidor, were again hit by Allied bombers, this time with 126 tons of explosives.

Nearly 1100 tons have been dropped on these bases so far this month; a blasting comparable to concentrating bombing in the past which have presaged invasion.

Air patrols smashed again at Didmop village north of the American line on Arawe Peninsula, on the southwest coast of New Britain and 65 miles from Cape Gloucester.

(A Tokyo broadcast picked up by the National Broadcasting Co. at New York, stating that the Japanese had recaptured Arawe was labeled by a MacArthur headquarters spokesman as "a complete exaggeration." He said "we are still

American Cost 5%

Arnold Reports Production Wiped Out in Triple Target

Wichita, Kans., Jan. 12 (AP).—Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Forces, said tonight that the huge air battle over Germany yesterday inflicted "one of the hardest blows yet struck against the German air force," at a cost of approximately 5 per cent of the American planes making the attack.

Arnold said three important fighter plane factories were smashed, meaning that hundreds of projected German fighter planes will never be manufactured.

"Production at these three plants which the Germans were struggling to increase has been wiped out altogether, and months must elapse before the damage can be repaired and fighter plane construction resumed there," he said.

Arnold was here on an official trip.

Arnold said the multiple attack—factories at Oschersleben, Halberstadt and Brunswick were hit—illustrated the extent to which the American air effort has been built up, and the constantly changing tactics of the air forces.

Arnold said announcement of details of the "outstandingly successful air battle" was delayed in London because bad weather developed, obscuring the bases to which the planes were scheduled to return and making it difficult for intelligence officers to locate the scattered crews to complete their reports.

The delay in the air forces communique, he added, "brought into more than usually clear relief the errors in the report made by the Nazi air command for propaganda purposes." The Germans had claimed destruction of 136 of the attacking planes, including 124 bombers. The air forces placed the loss at 64 planes—59 bombers and 5 fighters.

On that basis, a 5 per cent loss would mean there were at least

Yanks Capture Cervaro; Push On to Cassino

Piraeus Blasted

Path to Bastion Open

By Wes Gallagher

Algiers, Jan. 12 (AP).—The German high command announced today that Nazi troops had lost the fortress village of Cervaro "after hard fighting," and it was considered possible here that American forces already were pushing on beyond the town toward the key city of Cassino, only four miles away.

Last official reports reaching headquarters said American troops were closing in on Cervaro from the north, east and south, and that capture of the last formidable German stronghold before Cassino was expected momentarily.

Opens Way to Cassino

Cervaro's fall virtually would open a path for American and British forces of Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army to sweep on into Cassino, a bitterly-defended German bastion. Seventy airline miles from Rome, Cassino is on the main island railroad and highway that thread a series of valleys northwestward to the Eternal City.

Progress in the Cassino plain was slow as a sudden thaw again brought deep, sticky mud. Part of the comparatively slow pace of General Clark's offensive had been due to his determination to save American and British lives by pounding every foot of Nazi-held ground with big guns for hours before each advance.

Front dispatches told how American troops cleaned out a Nazi pocket of resistance about 800 yards north of Mount di Piperia, which is north of Cervaro, while farther west other Yank forces engaged in a bitter struggle for possession of Mount Capraro, a 2000-foot elevation about a mile northeast of Cervaro. Another Fifth Army unit occupied Mount Cicerelli, a ridge parallel to the Via Casi-

Dead Officer's Course Takes Bomber Home

A U. S. Liberator Base in England, Jan. 12 (AP).—The crew of a shattered Liberator struggling back from France on only one engine threw the body of their dead navigator into the English Channel to help lighten their ship—and credited this with saving their lives.

"We followed the course he gave us before he died, and it brought us through," Pilot Lieut. Glenn E. Jorgensen, of Freewater, Ore., said today. "We had unanimous faith in his navigation."

Make Grim Decision

Jettisoning their comrade's body was a grim decision to have to make, but with the plane dropping rapidly toward the ocean—with four wounded and two frostbitten men who would have drowned if the plane had "ditched" in the sea—and the crew throwing every thing loose overboard, from guns and ammunition to their radio and even their helmets, it was considered justified in an effort to save the lives of the other nine.

The Liberator, "Conquest Cavalier," was jumped by eight twin-engined Messerschmitts and a Junkers-88 rocket plane soon after it bombed northwest Germany a few days ago.

Shell Kills Navigator

The navigator was Lieut. Arthur E. Barks, Providence, R. I.

Shells tore a 2-foot hole in the stabilizers and blasted the engines, gasoline tank, radio and hydraulic and interphone systems.

One exploded in the navigator's abdomen, killing him instantly and wounding Bombardier Lieut. Roy D. Stahl, jr., Pontiac, Ill., and starting a fire with smoke so dense that Jorgensen could not see the copilot, Lieut. Charles R. Matthews, Thomaston, Ga., beside him.

The battle ended at the French coast and the fire was put out, but the plane was dropping so fast that the crew, after jettisoning everything, resorted to starting a dead, oilless engine to help the one good one, running it until it was a red-hot mass when it fell on the runway as they made a one-wheel landing at an English coastal field.

Vast Nazi Force Fights to Halt Crushing Blow at Germany's Heart

London (Thursday), Jan. 13 (AP). Sustaining a record loss of 64 planes, an American aerial task force of more than 1200 heavy bombers and long-range fighters shot down more than 100 German aircraft Tuesday to carry through a crushing attack at Germany's desperately guarded fighter aircraft industry with results officially described as excellent.

The operation, which struck three assembly plants in the heart of the Reich, was heralded here today as the opening of the "invasion front" air war.

It brought virtually all of the German air force into the sky—something Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering never was able to do concerning the British Air Force during the battle of Britain.

Of the total number of U. S. planes lost, 59 were from the force of 700 four-engined Flying Fortresses and Liberators and five were fighters. Returning American airmen said the Germans sent up every type of plane to ward off the bombing attack on Oschersleben, Halberstadt and Brunswick (Braunsweig), hidden away in a strongly defended part of Germany within a radius of 120 miles west and southwest of Berlin.

"Excellent Results"

A United States communique announced that the attacks were made with "excellent results" against the fighter assembly plants and said "other targets also were hit with good results."

The air battle developing out of the operation was one of the greatest of the entire war. A German admission that the Americans held the upper hand in the attack came from Fritz Backmann, a German air force commentator. In a DNB broadcast dispatch, he said:

"This time the advantage was with our enemies. The appearance of close bomber formations over Germany had the same terrifying effect as the appearance of the first tanks in France in 1917. Technical superiority may shift, but this time the advantage is with the enemy. . . . The enemy had more favorable conditions for aiming at their targets."

Heretofore, these German fighter plane factories, which are turning out the Nazis' strongest weapon to ward off an invasion, had been out of range of heavy daylight raids. German plane production facilities now are known to be virtually entirely concentrated on the manufacture of fighters.

595 Were Reported Lost

While the 64 American planes shot down constituted the greatest loss of aircraft ever sustained by the U. S. Eighth Air Force, the loss in American personnel was slightly lower than in the October 14 operation against Schweinfurt. A total of 595 men were lost Tuesday, as compared with 602 on the earlier operation.

The American losses in Tuesday's operation were closely rivaled by the twin Schweinfurt-Regensburg raids of August 17 and the Schweinfurt raid of October 14.

On the August 17 raid 59 bombers and five fighters also were lost, but the escort on that occasion included many RAF and Dominion fighters and no announcement was made then of how many if any of the escorting fighters downed were American. In that raid a total of 307 Nazi interceptors were shot down, which remains the highest Nazi loss in a single day.

In the October 14 attack on Schweinfurt, 60 heavy bombers and

M.P. Succeeded to Bedroom Of Cromwell, Court Told

Elizabeth, N. J., Jan. 12 (AP).—There are 30 rooms in Doris Duke Cromwell's mansion near Somerville, but James H. R. Cromwell's counsel told Chancery Court today the husband's valet was delayed getting into his bedroom because it was "occupied by his successor in his wife's affection."

State Senator John E. Toolan identified the occupant as "a truant member of the British Parliament who found Duke Farms (the estate near Somerville) as well as Mrs. Cromwell's home in Honolulu more relaxing than London, then undergoing the fury of Teutonic bombing."

[While the suit did not name the parliamentarian, the International News Service said he was believed to be Capt. Alec Stratford Cunningham-Reid, M. P. Charges to the effect that he fled the London blitz, it was recalled, were made in the House of Commons by Comdr. Oliver Locker-Lampson, 63, and resulted in a fist fight with Cunningham-Reid, who is 47, later in the corridors.—Editor's note.]

This was in 1940, Toolan told Advisory Master Dougal Herr. That is the year Cromwell, seeking a limited divorce which would not permit either principal to remarry, alleges the tobacco heiress, often called "the richest girl in the world," deserted him.

Her conduct had been "reprehensible" before that, Toolan said, but "the acme of refined cruelty was reached" when the valet was

Walker Reported Soon to Quit As Democratic Chairman

By Edward T. Folliard

Chicago, Jan. 12.—Postmaster General Frank C. Walker soon will resign as chairman of the Democratic National Committee, it was reliably reported here today.

Three men are being talked about as his successor in the chairmanship in this order:

Robert E. Hannegan of St. Louis, now in Washington as Collector of Internal Revenue.

Dan Kelly, Democratic national committeeman for North Dakota.

George Allen, former Commissioner of the District of Columbia, now secretary of the Democratic National Committee. Allen came originally from Mississippi, but is now looked upon as a Washingtonian.

Postmaster General Walker arrived here this morning to begin setting up the machinery for the Democratic National Convention of 1944, which is expected to be staged here not long after the Republican conclave of June 26.

Mr. Walker saw reporters in the Blackstone but declined to comment on the report that he would resign as national chairman.

Those close to him, however, say that he will submit his resignation at a meeting of the Democratic National Committee which he has called for January 22 in Washington to vote on a convention city and date.

The Postmaster General, it is known, was reluctant to take over the extra chore to start with. When President Roosevelt asked him to become chairman, in succession to Edward Flynn, New York party chief, it was with the understanding he would step down before the 1944 campaign got under way. Walker feels that he has enough to do as Postmaster General.

In response to questions about President Roosevelt and a fourth term, Walker reiterated today that he did not know what the Chief

Grand Jury Questions Sparks On 'Hopkins-Willkie Letter'

The District gand jury which yesterday began an inquiry into the "Harry Hopkins-Wendell Willkie" letter heard the testimony of C. Nelson Sparks, publisher of the letter Hopkins claims is a forgery, and Dr. Umphrey Lee, who claims he never received the letter.

Sparks, before entering the jury chambers, shrugged his shoulders when asked whether the letter was intended to harm either Willkie or Hopkins.

"The only way it could harm Willkie," he said, "would be to show his close connection with the New Deal."

Sparks used the letter in his book, "One Man—Willkie."

He displayed the document but would let no one touch it. It read:

"Dear Umphrey:

"What has been done in the . . . matter? Will you please write me what developments in the other situation? Willkie is going to be the man in my opinion, and I can promise you good cooperation from that quarter if you think it would be helpful.

"HARRY HOPKINS."

The blank space is covered by pencil markings. Sparks said it contained the word "Alamo," but that he had not obliterated it.

Hopkins, who denied signing the letter, was reported too ill to testify. Dr. Lee, to whom the letter was addressed, denied receiving it. Dr. Lee is president of Southern Methodist University, at Dallas, Tex.

Dr. Lee stated just before going before the grand jury that he would testify he did not receive the letter. Sparks said, "I didn't find the Hopkins letter in an ashcan."

Hopkins had asked for the investigation, and when questioned about this, Sparks said he was convinced of the letter's authenticity. He refused to say anything about how the letter had come into his

Nazis Spy In Venezuela, Paper Says

Caracas, Venezuela, Jan. 12 (AP).—The newspaper El Pais said today that the Spanish Embassy is distributing money to "no less than 200 Germans" carrying out pro-Nazi activities in Venezuela.

A German named Vite is head of the German intelligence service in Venezuela, the newspaper said.

El Pais declared Germans had talked freely among themselves about the arrival of between $2,000,000 and 2,500,000 bolivars (between $600,000 and $750,000), some of which was supposed to have come aboard the Spanish ship Cabo de Horno which touched at Puerto Cabello December 30.

London (Thursday), Jan. 13 (INS).—Norwegian airmen were revealed today to have spent Christmas Day winging back to their homeland to deliver Christmas cheer to their countrymen. The Norwegian telegraph agency said the airmen dropped coffee, chocolate and tobacco to waving crowds in Norway in a unique delivery of Christmas presents.

House Committee Acts to Relieve Liberated People

By the Associated Press

The House Foreign Affairs Committee late yesterday took the first legislative step toward furnishing relief to the peoples of war-devastated countries after their liberation from Axis domination.

The committee stamped its approval on a measure setting up the machinery for financial participation by this country in a cooperative air program planned by the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.

Written into the bill, however, was a provision restricting total amount which could be appropriated by Congres to $1,350,000,000—a figure based upon 1 per cent of the national income for 1943.

The committee also strengthened the language of the bill to confine its expenditures to "relief and rehabilitation," an amendment drafted with the idea of meeting objections that some of the funds would be used for repayment projects.

Port of Athens Blasted in Two Heavy Attacks

Algiers, Jan. 12 (AP).—The Allies' new round-the-clock Balkans bombing team—Flying Fortresses by day, RAF Wellingtons by night—has shifted its assault to the big Greek port of Piraeus after its shattering blow the previous day at Sofia, capital of Bulgaria.

Though handicapped by poor weather, the American bombers went in unerringly with their Lightning escort yesterday and rained tons of bombs on jetties, warehouses and railway facilities of the port which serves Athens, and through which supplies pass to German forces in the Aegean, it was announced today.

Fortress crewmen said many fires were started in the harbor and that one warehouse blew up. Thirty-eight Nazi fighters challenged the mission over southern Greece, and in the fight Fortress gunners shot down five enemy planes and their escorts destroyed another three. Seven American planes were lost.

As in the raid on Sofia, the two-engined British Wellingtons then swept in after dark and, guided by fires set by the Americans, dumped another huge load of explosives and incendiaries. The Wellingtons, capable of carrying bomb loads almost equal to those of the Fortresses, were reported to have started at least nine more blazes in Piraeus and to have touched off one mammoth explosion.

Nazis' Balkan Thrust

London, Jan. 12 (AP).—Yugoslav Partisans acknowledged today a 30-mile thrust by German tanks southward from Banja Luka to the Partisan mountain stronghold of Jajce, but said that elsewhere the Nazis were repulsed and their communications raided despite the constantly increasing forces they are hurling into their campaign.

Raid Wiped Out 3 Plane Plants

1280 planes in the attacking force.

Arnold's report of approximately 5 per cent loss among planes engaged was an over-all figure. There was no official breakdown to show how many of the attackers were bombers and how many were fighters.

However with more than 11 times as many bombers as fighters downed, the bomber loss percentage may have been higher than the over-all per cent.

A London report said more than 700 bombers took part, which would put the bomber loss at 8.4 per cent.

"The Germans are back on their heels, but we dare not let up," Arnold said. "They're going to fight with everything at their disposal and we've got to have more and more planes so we can deal them the death blow," he said.

Arnold explained that the strategy in sending out raiding parties against three objectives was to confuse the enemy.

"There are only a certain number of fighters the Germans can send up," he said. "They are confounded as to their defense, and this enables us to have the initiative.

"As we increase the number of bombers we send out, our losses will normally decrease."

The Army Air Chief said that "were it not for continuing attacks against the production capacities of German aircraft factories, Nazi efforts to double their fighter strength might have succeeded with the result that the difficulties which must be overcome by Allied air attacks and also by amphibious landing forces would be incalculably increased."

U. S. Bombers Wreck 3 Plane Plants

two fighters failed to return, while the Germans lost 104 planes.

Returning bomber crews from Tuesday's operation, commenting on earlier Swedish reports that an American Fortress group for the first time had sailed over the outskirts of Berlin, said they were not aware of any such plans and hinted that the alert in the German capital was caused instead by a diversionary attack of RAF Mosquitos.

In contrast to the record American loss, the German air force in its last big daylight raid on Britain before giving up hope of knocking out the Royal Air Force lost 185 planes on September 15, 1940, while only 25 RAF fighters were shot down then.

Amrican losses were less than half the record 124 bombers and 12 fighters claimed by the Germans in a day-long series of propaganda broadcasts.

The United States communique, delayed longer than any similar announcement has been, said: "At Oschersleben direct strikes were observed on machine ships and other factory installations manufacturing Focke-Wulf-190s.

"At Halberstadt a Junkers-88 and Junkers-188 component plant was heavily hit

"At Brunswick two of three main assembly buildings producing Messerschmitt-110s were destroyed and the third was badly damaged.

"Other targets were also hit with good results."

These other targets were not specified.

The Swedish reports also listed as a target the city of Magdeburg, 26 miles from Halberstadt, and site of Krupp armaments factories.

The bombers were escorted to their targets by clouds of American fighters: P-38 Lightnings, P-47 Thunderbolts, and an unidentified type of "long-range fighter" which possibly was a version of the P-51 Mustang.

"Opposition was strong and there were many fierce aerial combats," said the communique.

The Germans admitted losing no more than nine fighters.

While high United States officers labored to assemble and correlate all the information from the raid, however, returned fliers told of fierce battles with determined Nazi fighters and of a new kind of rocket which the Germans fired at the packs of bombers from the ground.

"Rockets exploded like big flak bursts, only five times bigger than any flak I ever saw," reported Lieut. Paul Coad, Los Angeles, Calif., a bombardier.

Capt. Kenneth R. Bickett of La Junta, Colo., pilot of the Fortress "Grim Reaper," said, "the rockets came up from the ground looking as big as a house. They threw off great clouds of smoke when they exploded."

DNB, German official news agency, asserted that more than a third of the raiders were brought down with the loss of more than 1000 men. It said a newly perfected system had sent up groups of fighters from a chain of defense stations in what was described as passing "the enemy formations from hand to hand."

It was the farthest penetration ever made into Germany by fighter escort. Halberstadt was last hit in 1940 by the RAF, which visited Brunswick twice in 1941 and once last September.

Oschersleben was severely damaged and production curtailed for many weeks as a result of a previous American raid July 28. It is believed to have been Germany's most important Focke-Wulf factory after the Marienburg plant was destroyed October 9.

A long-distance fighter group led by Maj. James R. Howard, St. Louis, Mo., was credited with downing 14 enemy planes and damaging a score of others without loss to itself. The group's score was raised to 32 German planes destroyed without loss

The heaviest fighting in all the spectacular air battles apparently developed at Oschersleben.

Flocks of fighters, 28 strong in some instances, charged single bombers, often risking collisions with the big raiders to press home with guns and aerial rockets their counterattacks in defense of the plant.

"I've never seen anything like it during my 15 missions," said the injured navigator of one Fortress in describing the three-hour battle with the German fighters. "They came in on us 28 at a time. I counted them."

A gunner on another plane said that "25 peeled off and came tearing head-on through our formation.

"They threw everything at us—even a big two-engined job which looked like a transport," said Lieut. William H. Hartlett, New Orleans, a Fortress pilot. "It looked like a merry-go-round the way they'd come creeping in, shoot, swing around then come back again."

More than 20 FW 190's came at another bomber head on. "I had to lift one wing or be rammed," the pilot said. "Those guys were desperate."

2 Jap Ships Sunk, 4 Hit In Marshalls

Pearl Harbor, Jan. 12 (AP).—New damage to enemy shipping, planes and ground installations in the Marshall Islands in a triple attack by Army or Navy bombers January 10 and 11 was announced today by Pacific Fleet headquarters. All our planes returned.

Heaviest of the three blows was that delivered yesterday by Liberator search planes of fleet wing two against Kwajalein. In a daring daylight attack from low altitude they sank two small Japanese cargo ships and damaged four others, started fires ashore and damaged two planes. There was no interception. Two enemy light cruisers, five small cargo ships and a small transport have now been sunk at Kwajalein and 13 cargo ships damaged.

Heavy bombers of the American Seventh Army Air Force struck at Mili atoll Monday night, but details were not given.

The same night another group of Seventh AAF heavies swept over Taroa Islet of Maloelap atoll. They wrecked two planes on hte ground and set a number of fires.

In a continuation of their nuisance raids, Japanese planes struck January 9 at American positions at Tarawa, Makin and Albemam in the Gilberts, but no damage resulted.

(Arawe was occupied by elements of the Sixth Army December 15 to divert enemy attention from the December 26 marine invasion at Cape Gloucester. The Americans captured the virtually unserviceable air strip northeast of Arawe Peninsula, but subsequently relinquished it to the enemy and fell back to the peninsula.)

Rabaul, the important Japanese base on northeast New Britain, was hit again by medium bombers from the South Pacific Solomons airfields. One airfield was bombed.

Train Collision Kills 96 in Spain

It's an Old Custom

Yanks' Skill With Rifle Amazes Nazis

By James F. King

The American soldiers' ability to use small arms with that speed and accuracy which tradition attributes to our Wild West heroes has amazed the Germans and saved many American lives, the War Department disclosed yesterday when it made public reports of two battle-front observers just returned from Italy.

Lieut. Col. James C. Mott and Lieut. Col. James I. King said the experience of the Fifth Army in Italy had proved the value of American theories of individual expertness with small arms, an expertness which has been stressed in the United States Army for 20 years and which is emphasized in the Army Ground Forces training program.

"Captured Germans," King said, "can't understand how the riflemen of an American parachute infantry regiment could face a burst of 40 or 50 rounds from the lightning-fast German machine pistol, then coolly dispose of their enemy with one well-aimed shot. Infantry paratroopers armed with Springfields equipped with telescopic sights were regarded with special awe by the Germans."

The observers told how a squad led by Lieut. Ernest Childers, so close to the enemy the front line was indiscernible, knocked out four machine gun nests. They saw a man seated near a gun in a rocky crevasse but could not determine whether he was American or German. Childers yelled. The man rose, revealing that he was a German officer. Recognition was mutual and Childers and the German fired almost simultaneously. The German was mortally wounded.

The machine gun nest was well protected from rifle fire, however, so an American heaved a rock into the nest. Two Germans, apparently mistaking the rock for a hand grenade, scrambled out. American marksmanship got them both before they could take cover. Using the captured position, Childers' squad wiped out three other German nests on the hilltop.

Then there was the experience of Pfc. Earl Duff, who had been pinned behind a low stone wall by machinegun fire. Looking for the gun, Duff crawled toward a break in the wall. Suddenly he found himself face to face with a German who had been crawling along the other side. Both reached for their guns and Duff won.

Poles Draft Reply to Soviet

London, Jan. 12 (AP).—The Polish cabinet, after a second all-day discussion of Moscow's offer of a modified Curzon line as the Polish-Russian boundary, was drafting a reply tonight which was expected to spar for more favorable terms but leave the way open for a settlement.

There was a widespread belief in London that the Poles eventually would submit to the Russian declaration under guidance of Britain and America.

The Russians said yesterday they intended to keep most of the Ukranian and White Russian territories incorporated into the Soviet Union in 1939, but suggested the slightly less drastic Curzon-line proposal of 1919 as a working basis and said Poland could recompense herself by gaining an outlet to the Baltic Sea at Germany's expense in the west.

The initial Polish reply, promised Thursday, may deal at length with data designed to refute the Russian assertion that the Polish government in London does not control the Polish underground resistance to the Germans.

The Poles also may cite population statistics to support hopes of regaining much of the eastern territory which the Russians claim is not predominantly populated by those of Polish origin.

Fighter in Pacific Denounces Strikes

Home-Front Squabbling Crushes Hopes Of Yanks, Naval Officer Reports in Letter

By the Associated Press

A letter from a naval lieutenant on combat duty in the Pacific, denouncing strikes and asserting "we have a double battle—one with our external enemies—the other with our internal enemies" has been received by Representative Compton (Republican) of Connecticut, who said he would bring it to the attention of the House.

The unnamed officer wrote to Compton after the Congressman defended Esquire magazine as an aid to morale among fighting men. Second-class mailing privileges of the publication are being revoked by Postmaster General Walker.

The lieutenant, married and father of a baby he's never seen, wrote that one American youth, killed by the Japs in his foxhole, was found clutching a picture of an Esquire Varga girl in his dead fingers.

Have So Little

"He had not wanted to risk leaving this picture in his tent at the mercy of the Japs," the lieutenant said. "These boys have so little; they have and hold foremost their memories, they eat and sleep as catch-can; they work and die gladly for a people, a Nation, an ungrateful America."

The lieutenant, who said his position charged him with personnel problems aboard his ship, said news of the railroad and steel strike threats in the ship newspaper, "had a direct deteriorating influence on the members of our crew."

"Tears came into eyes that have survived great naval battles, men who have fought and killed—'What's the use—where are we getting,' they asked,'" the officer wrote.

"We are out there not fighting for a new idealistic world, we are fighting for the world we knew, the life we lived in the past," he said.

Hopes Being Crushed

"We are being sold out by the American people who are not honestly making an effort to maintain things as they were. Yes, they'll work in a shipyard provided they receive five times the pay they deserve. I am only one in millions whose hopes are being crushed along with those of our men."

Saying he knew he was "sticking out my neck," by writing to Compton, whom he does not know, the lieutenant asserted that "though my office and my commission mean much to me, they mean nothing in comparison to my loyalty to my country."

Compton said he would place the letter in the Congressional Record. He commented that the document "is human and terrible in its feeling of futility and is an indictment that can be quashed only by a complete change of attitude and policy on the home front."

WAVES to Be Fixture in Navy

WAVES will serve in the Navy after the war, regardless of cuts in appropriations, it was predicted yesterday by Surgeon General Admiral Ross T. McIntire at the dedication of the first hospital corps school for women in the Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md.

Declaring that he hoped WAVES also would become a permanent part of the hospital corps, Admiral McIntire said:

"I believe that we never again will find a time when the Navy can be run without women. The hospital corps naturally will shrink, but after the war the number of places where the Navy must serve will increase, and we will still have many billets at home that can be filled by women.

"I hope before the war is over, we can use women, too, for duty beyond the continental limits of the United States. I have seen many places outside the country where you can be of help—and I don't think it is fair for the Army to be given all the interesting jobs overseas."

Capt. Mildred McAfee, WAVES director, described the hospital corps as "a real morale problem at training centers—because everyone wants to be assigned to it."

Two hundred and forty enlisted women will enter the new school every two weeks for a four-week course, after which graduates will be given further intensive training for three weeks in naval hospitals. Graduates may be rated from hospital apprentice, 2nd class, to pharmacist's mate, 2nd class.

Lt. Quayle From Washington Guns Japs on Navy Supply Ship

By Rembert James

Aboard the Flagship of an LST Cargo Fleet Ship in the Northern Solomons (By Airmail) (AP).—He weighed maybe 140 pounds, not heavy enough for a good halfback on a high school team.

QUAYLE

His face was thin and young. Very young. He talked about ideals and what they teach at Dartmouth. He talked, too, about the girlish wife he married last November and who lives with his parents at the Westchester in Washington, D. C.

I noticed these things about him at dinner the first night I boarded the ship. Anything but a rough guy. You wondered what he was doing here—an officer on the flagship of an LST flotilla hauling supplies to the outlaying bases in the Solomon Islands, one of the toughest jobs in the Navy.

I didn't really get acquainted with the kid until a couple of nights afterward when we were out on the forecastle in the moonlit Gizo Strait, waiting for the Japanese to attack with bombs and torpedoes.

Both kinds of attacks came, and they strafed the ship, but all this was a little later.

So he talked, mostly in snatches and phrases because he was listening for enemy planes. Part of the time we whispered not to disturb the crewmen, who also were listening for plane engines.

His name, he said, was Oliver A. Quayle 3d. His age was 22. His wife was 20. He became a naval ensign last year, after finishing at Dartmouth.

I wrote it down in my notebook in the moonlight along with the fact that his father runs a publishing house and formerly was treasurer of the Democratic National Committee.

He talked of many things that were far away from the Solomons, ice skating in New England, Chesapeake Bay oysters, Washington, D. C., and the people there.

"Lots of people," he said, "think politicians are rascals. It isn't true. My father is an honest man. So is James A. Farley. My father once introduced me to Mr. Farley. I admire him. He is a practical politician, but he's honest."

The young kid, now a lieutenant, moved over to the starboard lifeline, scanned the sea and the sky, and listened. There was no sound of plane engines.

"This is the tightest spot of all," he said, very low and calm.

"The strait is narrow and there are Japanese on Gizo Island, over to starboard, and on Gonongga, to the port. And there are thousands of Japs left on Kolombangara. You can see Kolombangara, that high volcano off the starboard quarter. That's Vella la Vella dead ahead. That's where we're going, with stuff for our garrison there."

We stood for several minutes. The gun crewmen, anonymous in their battle helmets, were silent and watchful at their stations. The haze that hovers over the South Seas before dawn made the moon seem very dim.

"You know," Quayle resumed, "this is a tough ship to be on. The crew has it hard, and some of them are just kids. We go up to these bases all the time, and we're always being attacked."

He stopped and listened again. No planes, yet. He was whispering when he said:

"Still, it's worth it. I know what I'm fighting for. I had a happy life before, and I know it's worth while fighting those who want to destroy it. It's funny to fight. I never shot even a rabbit until this business started."

The ship quivered with a change of rudder. I looked back toward the bridge. There were five brand new Japanese flags painted on the bridge for planes shot down. I couldn't see them in the moonlight, but the afternoon before the skipper, Lieut. B. W. Robb, 29, of Detroit, had pointed them out and said Quale's gunners had downed three of the planes on the last trip.

Skipper Robb was on the bridge. I could see him, bareheaded as always, silhouetted against the sky. The soldily-built man beside him was the navigator, Lieut. (j g.) W. A. Henry, Newport, R. I. Henry had been in the Navy 23 years and they say he can plot a course through these islands better than anyone else in the South Seas.

Quayle was listening for planes. Up ahead there were flashes of light. Tracer shells.

"Raid at Vella la Vella," said Quayle. "Hope they don't see us. This is an important cargo."

The ship changed rudder again. I walked back toward the bridge. The skipper was watching the horizon. You don't talk to the skipper at a time like this. Everybody keeps doing what they came here to do—working.

New Soviet Drive Gains in Southern White Russia

cations line in the area.

In one of their strongest counter-attacks since the Russians began their current series of successful offensives, the Germans lashed out east of Vinnitsa with heavy forces, seeking to stem Vatutin's left wing pushing south toward the Bug River and Rumania.

A heavy barrage of massed Russian artillery met the German assaults and the operations ended after more than 2000 Germans were killed, with the Germans back in their original positions.

Between this area and Sarny, Vatutin's forces captured 50 towns and hamlets west of Novograd Volynski, including Muzhilovichi, 18 miles from Novograd Volynski and 3 miles from the highway junction of Korets.

West and northwest of Kirovograd, where the Germans suffered one of their severest defeats of the current campaign, Gen. Ivan S. Konev's Second Ukrainian army dislodged the Germans from several heavily fortified populated places. A Soviet motorized detachment broke into the German rear, attacked an air field and set fire to 40 grounded planes, and routed a German headquarters unit before wheeling back to its own lines.

South of Belaya Tserkov in the Dnieper Bend, where Vatutin's forces were nearest a junction with Konev's army, the Russians captured several populated places.

Commenting on the furious German attack near Vinnitsa the London Daily Express said a crisis in the battle was expected in the next 48 hours, when the fate of the whole German armies in the Ukraine probably would be decided.

The Germans were reported bringing up troops from Rumania to support a do-or-die stand.

The Germans were conceded, by means of hard battles and heavy losses, to be holding open the narrow escape corridor for the forces in the Smela-Kanev area of the upper Dnieper bend below Kiev.

It was remarked that the bitter fighting of the Germans was not surprising, as only thus could they hope to avoid catastrophe in the whole area stretching west and south to Odessa.

The Germans themselves, asserted they had cut off and "destroyed" a Russian division, a tank brigade and an artillery detachment in the last 24 hours southeast and southwest of Pogrebische. The Russians previously have announced capture of Ilintsy, 28 miles south of Pogrebishche, and Nenirov, 40 miles southwest.

The German account admitted that Soviet attacks had been newly intensified, with strong onslaughts on the Crimea northeast of Kerch and on the northern front near Vitebsk.

lina south of Cervaro.

The Eighth Army front near the Adriatic remained quiet except for patrol skirmishes. (A German broadcast said Lieut. Gen. Sir Oliver Leese was hauling up reserves of men and equipment and apparently was about ready to open a "large-scale" offensive.)

American Mitchell bombers hit rail yards at Falconara, northeast of Rome, and at Fabriano in north central Italy. Warhawk fighters bombed and strafed freight trains supplying Nazi troops on the Adriatic coast, and night bombers attacked an iron and steel works at Piombino on the Italian west coast, 40 miles south of Leghorn. In all the widespread aerial operations, including Balkan forays, 11 enemy planes were destroyed against a loss of 7 Allied craft.

Advocates of Service Law Count on People's Patriotism

worker's freedom to select a suitable job, should be protected as far as possible.

It should be recognized that the manpower problem is primarily a local problem—that disruption of family life should be avoided—that movement of workers from area to area should be minimum.

Prerogatives of management should be left undisturbed as far as possible, but labor should be protected against arbitrary action by employers.

The rights of labor, including recognition of collective bargaining and wage and working condition standards, should be maintained.

Draft boards, schools, management-labor committees, the U. S. Employment Service should all be used in administering the law.

Many similar safeguards already have been written into the new Austin-Wadsworth bill, on which the House Military Committee will go to work Tuesday and the Senate Military Committee already has started hearings.

Senate hearings will be resumed Tuesday, when Austin will call before the committee Col. Lewis Sanders, War Department analyst loaned to the committee. Sanders is expected to testify on his recent report that there were 10 to 15 per cent shortages in some materials in 1943, due to inadequate manpower controls, and lacking these, there will be more of the same shortages in 1944. Another witness will be Col. Francis V. Keesling, Selective Service liaison officer, to explain selective features of the proposed law.

At yesterday's hearings, Austin described his pending bill, which makes males 18 to 65 and women 18 to 50 "liable" to service if volunteer calls fail to meet manpower shortages, but limits actual conscription to only the number and type of persons best fitted to perform the required work with the least comparative sacrifice.

Questioning Austin, Senate committeemen debated the four conditions to the President's indorsement—a realistic tax law, continuation of the contract renegotiation law, food cost control and extension of the Stabilization Act.

It was in response to questions by Senator Downey (Democrat) of California on these conditions that Austin said he would not "crowd" the bill, but would rely on popular backing. He said polls and earlier hearings already indicate widespread support and segments of the population which have not expressed themselves should have an opportunity to be heard.

Senator Lodge (Republican) of Massachusetts said he thought the question was whether the manpower problem will be worse or better in 1944, while Senator Revercomb (Republican) of West Virginia questioned the connection between national service and the four other issues. Austin said he thought the President was justified in presenting the whole economic picture as he sees it.

Downey told the committee that if the workers were assured by action on the other four points that the cost of living would be stabilized and profits held down they might "happily acquiesce" in national service legislation. He argued that if national service did away with the right to strike, economic stability should be coupled with it.

"You don't need such a law (to prevent strikes) today," Revercomb said. "Haven't we already passed such a law (Connally Antistrike Act)?"

Austin told the committee his bill would not abrogate labor's right to strike, but would operate to remove the causes of strikes.

In his interview yesterday, Undersecretary of War Patterson said transfer of skilled labor or conscription of new workers would be necessary only in an occasional program, such as production of Boeing's B-29 "super bomber" just getting under way.

"It would be the enactment of a moral principle that everyone has always admitted—the duty of every citizen to contribute according to his ability," Patterson said. "It would be very heartening to the soldiers and sailors, particularly to those overseas, because it would mean the country was going all out in their support so far as employment of manpower is concerned. There would be a moral effect on our enemies, too—it wouldn't do them any good . . ."

Reno decree, and attempt to persuade the court at Reno to set aside its decree on the strength of New Jersey evidence that her true residence was not in Nevada.

Toolan accused Cromwell's multimillionaire wife of "reprehensible" conduct while Cromwell was the American Minister at Ottowa early in 1940.

"She humiliated him greatly," said Toolan, "by her indifference and her rejection of those duties which necessarily rested upon the wife of a high diplomatic official. The story of that conduct and her carryings-on in Ottawa will have to be told at the divorce hearing in this case, painful and shocking as that story will be."

In May of 1940, on the eve of the Democratic senatorial campaign, Toolan continued, Mrs. Cromwell "cruelly designed" his public embarrassment.

Though she had promised him the use of Duke Farms, her estate near Somerville, as a campaign headquarters, she denied him this privilege and early in the campaign ordered him to remove his clothes with the warning that otherwise she would remove them, Toolan said. It was then, he alleged, that the valet was kept waiting.

Toolan continued:

"While the British Casanova was expected as a guest, Mrs. Cromwell at Honolulu was unexpectedly delivered of a child. Cromwell, intending at once to interrupt and if need be abandon his campaign, cabled her he was coming on by the next clipper."

She refused to see him, a "cruel step" intended to make the public believe he was more interested in the campaign than in her.

Also, she came to New Jersey a month before the election to propose a divorce and two days before the election flew again to Honolulu.

She not only publicly forfeited a chance to vote for her husband said Toolan, but also for President Roosevelt. Four years earlier she had given $50,000 to the Roosevelt campaign.

Cromwell, incidentally, conducted his campaign from the Spring Lake summer home of his mother, the widow of E. T. Stotesbury, wealthy Philadelphia banker.

She had "the thrill" of seeing Cromwell defeated in a campaign in which "it is hard to believe" her conduct had not alienated thousands of votes.

Only after Cromwell had refused "to be a party to a collusive divorce" in New Jersey did she go to Nevada, giving as her reasons the climate there and heavy taxation in New Jersey.

Hoolan then took up an allegation in Mrs. Cromwell's divorce case that her husband had sought a seven-million-dollar settlement.

"If ever there was a wicked and unpardonable falsehood . . . that was it," he told the court. "True, there was to be a seven-million-dollar foundation, but the idea was her own and that of her financial adviser and the control of that fund was to lie in the hands of five persons to be selected by her, only one of whom was to be Mr. Cromwell, with no right in it ever to touch a dollar of the corpus of that fund."

Toolan suggested that Cromwell's effort to induce his wife to use part of her vast income philanthropically had contributed to their split. He possessed ample means for himself and used them generously, the lawyer added.

Now, Toolan said, the time had come when, because of the prominence of the principals in the case, the public must be shown that wealth could not buy justice. Whereas the Nevada divorce case had been heard behind closed doors, Cromwell would ask only open hearings in his suit, which would involve taking of depositions in several parts of the world.

Advisory Master Herr gave Mrs. Cromwell 30 days in which to answer the three motions.

Santa Barbara, Calif., Jan. 12 (AP). Doris Duke Cromwell, visiting friends here, declined today to comment on charges made by attorneys for her husband, James H. R. Cromwell, in his New Jersey court action for a limited divorce.

Ciano Received 'Courtesy;' Saw His Executioners

At the Swiss-Italian Frontier, Jan. 12 (AP).—Count Galeazzo Ciano, executed at Verona yesterday for "treason" to his father-in-law, Benito Mussolini, was given the final "courtesy" of being allowed to face a blackshirt firing squad with open eyes.

Persons convicted of treason usually are blindfolded and shot in the back. Presumably this was the fate of old Marshal Emilio De Bono and three other former members of the Fascist Grand Council who were executed with Ciano, according to reports from Italy.

U. S. Indictment Accuses Chase Bank

"The indictment alleges that the bank conspired to aid the Axis. This is ridiculous. We are no more guilty of such action than is the Attorney General himself, and we resent having our reputation damaged in this manner.

"What has been done in the name of the administration of justice is a plain outrage on the home front and crass stupidity on the international front."

Biddle charged Smit established Elsantum, Inc., in Panama as a non-American "front" for sales of diamonds which reached Germany and Japan, and Chase National was accused of aiding these operations by carrying on regular banking and credit transactions with the Smit firms.

Biddle described the indictments as "the most significant application to date" of the criminal sanctions of the Trading With the Enemy Act, and the first time in this war that such action had been brought against an American banking institution.

An immediate result, Biddle asserted, "will be the shutting off of what is believed to be one of the worst leaks of strategic industrial materials out of this country to the enemy."

President Proposes Vast Road Network

President Roosevelt submitted to Congress yesterday a proposal for development of a national highway system of approximately 34,000 miles to provide a network of modern roads "essential to the future economic welfare and defense of the Nation."

It was estimated the program would cost 750 million dollars annually, "over a reasonable period of years."

The Chief Executive transmitted to the legislators a report by a national interregional highway committee which he appointed in April, 1941, to look into the need for a limited system of national highways and the possibility of using manpower and industrial capacity which will be available at the end of the war.

Mr. Roosevelt did not say how much of the 34,000 miles represented new construction and how much represented improvement of existing roads. He did assert that the system follows, in general, the routes of existing Federal-aid highways, and the expenditures would be divided about equally between urban and rural roads.

The Chief Executive said early action by Congress in authorizing joint designation by the Federal and State Governments of a national system of interregional highways was desirable so as to facilitate acquisition of land, the drafting of detailed plans, and other preliminary work.

The interregional committee estimated that upward of 20 years would be required to complete the highway system and suggested the cost be borne by the Federal, State and possibly local governmental agencies on a share basis to be determined by the affected agencies.

The report said the construction would provide direct and indirect employment for 2,000,000 men after the war.

Senate Approves Tax Bill Features

ters," said Senator George, paraphrasing the President's statement on taxes.

With net Federal receipts expected to total $43,599,000,000 in the current calendar year, if the pending bill is included, Senators shrugged off the idea of additional taxes in a campaign year, but displayed keen interest in the promise of Senator George to undertake a long overdue "simplification" of Federal taxes.

At the conclusion of the day Senator George and Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, Democrat floor leader, asserted that absence of amendments from the floor indicated that the Senate had accepted all the revenue features of bill. No comment was offered on the outcome of the controversial revision of the War Contracts Renegotiation Act reported out by the Finance Committee. A compromise was said to be in the making, however, which may take the Senate hurdles even though it will not be satisfactory in Administration quarters.

Without debate the Senate voted to leave the present income tax unchanged for another year but changed the special victory tax to a flat levy of 3 per cent of income in excess of $624 regardless of family status. Likewise, the Senate approved a repealer of the earned income tax credit in the present structure, and a provision disallowing the deduction of Federal excise tax payment in computing personal income taxes. The individual income tax provisions, as approved, are expected to add $664,900,000 to Federal revenues in a full year's operation.

Changes in corporation taxes were confined to the excess profits tax, increased from 90 to 95 per cent, with an increase from $5000 to $10,000 specific exemption from excess profits. Action on a proposed reduction in the credits allowed for computing excess profits on the invested capital basis was deferred until Friday at the request of Senator Harold H. Burton (Republican), of Ohio. If the Finance Committee credit reductions—from a present 7 to 6 per cent on $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 of invested capital and 6 to 5 per cent on $10,000,000 to $200,000,000—are retained, the additional yield from excess profits taxes will amount to $502,700,000.

Without a dissenting voice and with no debate, the Senate approved a provision requiring nonprofit organizations, including labor unions, to make income returns to the Treasury even though not subject to taxation.

Except for the proposed increase in general admission taxes to 1 per cent per 10 cents to 1 cent per 5 cents, and 11 per cent of the charge over 10 cents to 20 per cent of the charge over 10 cents, and a rise in the tax on toilet articles, the Senate approved a long list of excise tax and service charge increases including postal rates. The excise and service charge increases are expected to yield an additional $1,108,000,000.

Jap Arms Lack Fire Power, Gen. Barnes Says

Detroit, Jan. 12 (AP).—Captured Japanese army equipment shows that "Japan does not belong in the 'big league,'" Maj. Gen. G. M. Barnes, chief of the development branch of the United States Army Ordnance Department, told the Society of Automotive Engineers tonight.

"Her weapons lack fire power," he said, "and this disadvantage will prove fatal as we solve the logistic problems and push forward, step by step, pressing home our power drives."

The ordnance expert said that in the recent fighting at Tarawa it was found the Japanese were using a new rifle of larger caliber.

"Thus, the Japanese have had to admit," he said, "that they have made a major error in the caliber of the basic weapon of the army, the infantry rifle."

Missouri Town's Corn Boom Laid To Error by OPA

Monett, Mo., Jan. 12 (AP).—A typographical error by the Office of Price Administration at Washington is given the blame or credit for making this Missouri town of 4099 population temporarily the top corn trading center of the world.

The OPA announced price ceiling in Chicago was $1.16 a bushel while in Monett it was $1.19½. As a result, Monett traded two million bushels last week, the heaviest corn activity in the country.

Grain dealer L. E. Lines reported tonight that his store bought 25 carloads of corn—"I don't know how many bushels that is, but it's sure a lot of corn."

Eccles Renamed A Governor of Federal Reserve

Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, was nominated by President Roosevelt yesterday for another 14-year term of membership on the board.

Abe Fortas was formally nominated to resume his post as Undersecretary of the Interior. Fortas resigned that position last year to enter the Navy. After a medical discharge, the President gave him a recess appointment to his old position.

T. M. Roberts' Funeral Rites Will Be Today

Funeral services for Thomas M. Roberts, retired electrical engineer of the supervising architect's office of the Treasury Department, will be held at 11 a. m. today at Parish Hall, 15th and Harvard sts. nw., with burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery. Mr. Roberts died Monday at his home, 3037 Dent pl. nw., after a brief illness.

Born in The Dalles, Oreg., Mr. Roberts was graduated in 1893 from the University of Oregon and in 1898 from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology with a degree in electrical engineering.

He was employed by engineering firms including the General Electric Co. and the Edison Storage Battery Co. prior to becoming in 1917 associate engineer in the Bureau of Yards and Docks of the Navy Department. In 1926 he was transferred to the Treasury Department where he was employed until his retirement in 1937.

A member of All Soul's Unitarian Church, he was active in its Layman's League and was superintendent of the church school from 1920 to 1923. He was a life member of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

H is survived by his wife, Mrs. Violet Kent Roberts, and by two sisters, Mrs. George R. Stephenson and Mrs. Ralph Davies, both of Oregon.

Walter McK. Jones

Funeral services for Walter McK. Jones, 60, operator of coffee and sugar plantations in Puerto Rico, will be held at 11 a. m. today at Gawler's funeral home, 1756 Pennsylvania ave. nw. Mr. Jones died Monday at Doctors Hospital.

The son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Jones of Portsmouth, N. H., and Boston, Mass., he received his early education in Europe and at St. Mary's Academy, Boston. Following his graduation from Harvard in 1905, he went to Puerto Rico where he became interested in civic and business affairs.

Mr. Jones operated both sugar and coffee plantations in Puerto Rico, and was the second American to be elected to the Puerto Rico House of Representatives, serving for eight years.

He was a member of the Metropolitan Clubs of Washington and New York, the Manhattan Club of New York, the Harvard Club of New York and the Harvard Alumni of Washington, the Jefferson Island Club and the National Press Club.

Surviving is his wife, the former Miss Helen Buchanan, whom he married in 1916. Mrs. Jones is the daughter of the late Gen. James A. Buchanan, who led the American troops in Puerto Rico during the Spanish-American War.

Ervin L. Anderson

Funeral services for Ervin Leech Anderson, 63, of 2633 15th st. nw, will be held today at 3 p. m. at Hines funeral home, 14th and Harvard sts. nw., with burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Until his retirement several years ago Anderson was an administrative officer with the Agriculture Adjustment Administration. He came to Washington in 1930 from Denton, Tex., where he was dean of foreign languages at North Texas Teachers College.

Anderson was a graduate of the University of West Virginia and had done graduate work at Leland Stanford University, Columbia University and Marburg University in Germany.

He is survived by his widow and three sons, Corpl. Ervin Anderson of Fort Jackson, S. C.; James Anderson, a student of Princeton University, and John Anderson of Washington, and one daughter, Mrs. Donald Fischer of Washington.

Walker May Quit Democratic Post

Executive's plans were.

"And I don't think he himself has made up his mind," Walker added.

He said he was still in favor of a short political campaign this year, but he seemed to agree that the logic of the situation was against him. The Republican answer to the short campaign plea is that President Roosevelt already has started his campaign for four more years in the White House; consequently they have decided to hold their own national convention at the usual time.

This seems to have forced the hand of the Democrats. Walker said that the matter of a date would have to be settled by the Democratic National Committee, but the hotel people here expect that the Democrats will come to town early in July, probably during the week of July 10.

Chicago, Jan. 12.—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and Wendell Willkie topped possible contenders for the Republican presidential nomination today in a poll taken among members of the party's National Committee.

The test of sentiment also disclosed that 23 had not yet decided which candidate they would prefer.

Tabulation of the survey made by the Associated Press during the committee's meeting here Monday and Tuesday showed Dewey and Willkie with 21 votes each and 17 scattered among 6 other figures.

Mrs. Cornelia W. Snyder

Funeral services for Mrs. Cornelia Wolcott Snyder, wife of Admiral Charles Philip Snyder, retired, now serving as naval inspector general, will be held at 2:15 p. m. today at St. John's Church, 16th and H sts. nw., with burial in Arlington Cemetery. Mrs. Snyder died Tuesday at Casualty Hospital.

The former Miss Cornelia Lee Wolcott, daughter of the late Capt. C. C. Wolcott, Civil Engineer Corps, USN, she was married to Admiral Snyder June 10, 1902. They made their home in Washington at 1870 Wyoming ave. nw.

In addition to her husband she is survived by three children, Comdr. Philip W. Snyder, USN, on duty at the Navy Department here; Mrs. Ethelbert Watts and Mrs. W. M. Collins, both of Alexandria, Va.

Luce Flies to Coast; Will Take Wife Home

San Francisco, Jan. 12 (AP).—Representative Clare Boothe Luce, of Connecticut, today canceled the remainder of a Western political speaking tour because of the death of her daughter, Ann Clare Brokaw, 19, in an automobile accident.

Henry R. Luce, editor of Time, Life and Fortune magazines, arrived by plane from the East today. He and Mrs. Luce will accompany the body of Miss Brokaw to New York.

rk-Point Lapse Would Cause her 'Famines,' Houston Warns

By Christine Sadler

remove pork from rationing temporarily would bring e shortages of butter and lambs and other meats to the n's coastal areas, Col. Bryan ton, Deputy Administrator for ming, declared yesterday.

e OPA official said he could believe Congress would pass esolution introduced in the te this week to throw off all t rationing until "distribution nnels are unclogged," and as- ed a billion more fat and meat on points are now validated the actual supplies on hand rant.

his "inflation" of brown points brought about consciously, he , to clear trade channels of the rd pork kill coming to market. working out satisfactorily, he ered, but will not be continued February. The 5-point pork 's stamp good through this will not be duplicated, he and higher point values for and beef can be expected for ruary, March and April.

When we lowered the values ork, of course, we put a strain butter and distribution of but- now is not as good as formerly ause consumers living in the ter-producing areas have more nts with which to take it up," said.

he present backing up of hogs erminal markets is due mainly "limited slaughterhouse facili- and a grave shortage of man- er," he said, and is not some- ng the OPA can correct with oning points.

Lifting pork rationing, Colonel uston declared, would have the owing "serious implications:"

. The point values of other toned meats and fats would e to be increased by an aver- of 62 per cent to absorb the billion stamps available this nth for pork. Butter, for in- nce, would need to be increased m 16 points to 26 points a nd, hamburger from 6 to 10 nts, and cheese from 10 to 16 nts.

. If pork could be purchased hout points, most of it would be ght up in the Midwestern areas where it is produced. Unless the point value of beef, lamb, veal, butter and other brown-stamp foods were raised sharply, most of these foods also would be consumed in the producing areas.

3. Within the past few days OPA has received complaints from both Pacific and Atlantic coastal regions that pork actually is becoming scarce. To further relax restrictions on consumption would "only make this unfavorable condition worse."

"The enormous purchasing power of the American people seems to have been forgotten by persons wanting rationing thrown off," Colonel Houston said.

With the special pork stamp in his hands, the average consumer during the first two weeks in January has been able to purchase 3½ pounds of meat weekly—compared to 1.6 pounds for each person last October.

Members of the War Meat Board and WFA officials, he said, have expressed belief the worst of the "pork situation" will be over before February.

Welders to Be X-Rayed to Learn Fumes' Effects on Lungs

By Walter Wood

The Maritime Commission disclosed yesterday that 5000 welders in the Nation's shipyards will be examined to determine whether fumes from their welding torches cause lung infections.

The decision to make the survey, it was said, was brought about by a feeling among some welders—particularly those who work deep in the holds of ships—that breathing the fumes gives them colds and chest ills.

Dr. Philip Drinker of Harvard University, identified as the inventor of the "iron lung," will make X-ray tests with the aid of United States Public Health Service doctors. The Navy has approved the plan, it was said, and it has been accepted by the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America (CIO). The AFL shipbuilders union is expected also to indorse the survey.

The "spot-check" survey will begin in the next two or three weeks in shipyards on the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf Coasts and the Great Lakes.

Welders to be examined will be taken off their jobs for the tests, but will be paid prevailing wages for the estimated one hour required.

The examinations, planned by the division of shipyard labor relations, of Maritime Commission, will cost approximately $10,000, it was said, and are expected to settle once and for all whether the welding fumes are injurious to a man's health.

Final details of the plan will be made at a meeting here next week and Dr. Drinker, who is chief health consultant of the Maritime Commission, will start the work after shipyards selected for the tests are notified.

Asthma Mucus Loosened First Day
For Thousands of Sufferers
Choking, gasping, wheezing, recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma rob you of sleep and rob your blood of vitally important oxygen because you can't get air in and out of your lungs properly. But now it is no longer necessary to suffer from these terrible attacks without the benefit you may receive from a physician's prescription called Mendaco. Within a very short time after the first dose, Mendaco ingredients start circulating thru the blood, thus reaching the smallest as well as the largest Bronchial tubes where they usually quickly help liquefy, loosen and remove thick, strangling mucus (phlegm), thereby promoting freer breathing and more restful sleep. In fact, Mendaco has proved so successful in helping thousands of sufferers from recurring spasms of Bronchial Asthma that it is sold under a guarantee of money back unless completely satisfactory. So get Mendaco from your druggist today for only 60c.

Inconstant Women

Despite the very considerable contribution that women have made to the war effort at home, it appears that many of them have seriously failed in loyalty and devotion to their men in the front lines. In an interview with the press last week, Maj. John S. Garrenton, chaplain of the India-China wing of the Air Transport Command, spoke in high indignation of the fact that our servicemen overseas are harassed and worried by reports of the inconstant conduct of the women they have left at home. He explained that the reports reach the men by way of careless talk and gossiping stories passed on by their fellow sailors and soldiers who come from this country. "The woman," the major said, "who has a husband overseas wading through hell, sweat and blood and who is playing around over here with another man is about the lowest thing I know—and the next lowest is the man who runs around with her." We share the major's indignation and find the distinction he draws between the relative responsibility of the offending pair both penetrating and accurate. There would be no wolves if there weren't any Red Riding Hoods. For in the final analysis it is the woman who sets the standards by which the relationship between the sexes is governed.

The causes for this demoralizing state of affairs is not, we believe, difficult to discover. It derives from the serious dislocation of civilian life which accompanies a total war. Overnight women have been offered a variety of new and exciting skills, together with a bulging pay envelope, unaccustomed economic freedom, and jobs away from home. Moreover, married women have been systematically subjected to severe pressures to seek work outside the home. War jobs have been made synonymous with patriotism. Indeed, there are few girls or women throughout the country who have not found themselves dislodged from their peacetime habits and customs by the impact of the war. Excitement, new faces, strange environments and fresh opportunities have become the order of the day. In these circumstances a modern Penelope must of necessity be a person of character and integrity, most especially if she lives in an inflated boom town. But to explain the causes is not to condone the consequences. The time, it would seem, has more than arrived for the wives and sweethearts of our men in the armed forces to take themselves in hand. By denying themselves petty distractions and philandering diversions they will serve their country both at home and abroad. Broken hearts may lead to broken homes, and are not fit reward for men who carry the heavy burden of the fighting.

Polish Policy

The Soviet government's declaration on Soviet-Polish relations wears an appearance of moderation. For instance, it proclaims Russia's desire for Polish friendship on the basis of "solid, good neighborly relations and mutual respect." It professes to favor "the regeneration of Poland as a strong and independent state," and urges Poland to become a signatory to the Russian-Czechoslovak treaty of alliance. It goes on to declare that the 1939 borders of Poland (the borders established as a result of the Ribbentrop-Molotov agreement) are not unchangeable. "In these borders," it says, "corrections can be included to the advantage of Poland . . . in districts in which there is an overwhelming Polish population." And, finally, the Soviet government suggests that Poland compensate herself for the loss of territory in the east by "incorporating in Poland the primordial Polish lands previously taken away by Germany," meaning East Prussia and Silesia.

A closer examination of the Soviet government's declaration, however, raises some questions. In the first place, it seems to express Russia's determination to deal with the Polish frontier problem unilaterally. Neither the United Nations as a group nor Poland herself appears to have anything to say about this question. Secondly, the Russian claim is based on the dubious legality of the "plebiscites" carried out in the disputed Polish region after that region was annexed by the Soviet Union following the deal with Hitler's Reich. Thirdly, and by implication, the Soviet declaration contains the suggestion that no government will be allowed to rule Poland except a government satisfactory to the Kremlin. Not otherwise can be explained the gratuitous denunciation of the present Polish government-in-exile as one "incapable of establishing friendly relations with the Soviet Union."

Now at Moscow some time ago Russia, Great Britain, the United States and China jointly declared that they "recognize the necessity of establishing at the earliest practicable date a general international organization, based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all peace-loving states." Put the proposed settlement of the Polish-Russian dispute into this context, and you will find reconciliation difficult. May it not be that the new Russian declaration was made known at Teheran, and was acquiesced in by Britain and America? May it not also be that the Polish government-in-exile, knowing of this situation, is preparing to accept that new declaration? Certainly it could do worse. The new proposals, whatever else they do, would establish a viability for the new Poland which she did not possess before.

Mr. Crowley's Defense

The fact that Mr. Jesse Jones exempted 13 of the most controversial war projects from Leo T. Crowley's FEA appears to be tacit evidence that there is a Tweedledum-Tweedledee relation between Mr. Crowley and Mr. Jones. To be sure, Mr. Crowley is autonomous as to finance, as the Vice President at the old Board of Economic Warfare wasn't. This is due in part to the self-financing of some of the constituent agencies, such as Lend-Lease; in part to an administrative order from Justice Byrnes authorizing the RFC to provide the FEA with a lump sum appropriation. But, in addition to the chunk of authority which Mr. Jones cut for himself out of Mr. Crowley's jurisdiction, there seems to have been a dovetailing of staffs.

Mr. Crowley, in a statement issued Tuesday, gives the dimensions of that dovetailing. "I have coordinated," he says, "activities of Mr. Jones' foreign corporations in such a way as to make the maximum use of RFC's trained personnel." Thus Mr. Jones not only has kept 13 projects outside Mr. Crowley's orbit; he has got his hand well dug into FEA itself. This is its own commentary on the President's Executive Order of last July ending the Wallace-Jones rift. The President ordered what he called a "fresh start with new men, unencumbered by interagency dissension and bitterness."

In the circumstances the observation in Mr. Crowley's statement on that feud is perfectly understandable. "I have never conceived it my duty," he said, "to carry on the original disagreement between Vice President Wallace, former head of OEW, and Mr. Jesse Jones." Of course not. Mr. Crowley sees eye to eye with Mr. Jones, and seems to have done his part in perpetuating and even expanding the Jones influence, despite the President's order. There can be no health in this Administration as long as Mr. Jones is allowed to function as a proliferating Pooh Bah. His appetite grows upon what it feeds, and, judging from Mr. Crowley's statement, it has been feeding plenty at FEA's expense.

The FEA has an immense job to do. Upon it devolves the operation of the reconstruction job on the very heels of this global war. The job requires statesmanship and generalship, and there is no evidence that Mr. Crowley—who, like Mr. Jones, has his hands full with other jobs, anyway—is possessed of either attribute. More than that, FEA is endowed with the carrying out of a permanent economic policy in our relations abroad. It will be called upon to develop that policy at the instigation of Secretary Hull. We are glad to note from Mr. Crowley's statement that FEA-State Department relations are close and cordial. We hope the State Department reciprocates the sentiment. From the outside the link appears to be as loose and informal as the link between FEA and UNRRA, and therefore as productive of cross-purposes. An organizational problem, we think, still exists. In the light of the rapidly evolving war situation, it should be clarified.

In this connection Mr. Crowley has promised a statement in a New York speech on January 17. He says he is going to expound his views on American postwar economic policy. Is that his function? Under the separation of powers he was supposed to be responsible only for operation, with Secretary Hull left in charge of policy. It looks as if the speech itself would be a border raid on Mr. Hull's domain. In that domain, furthermore, the Secretary of State has lived and worked all his life, while Mr. Crowley has been busying himself with his purely domestic concerns. However, the time is overdue to state and pursue a policy by responsible authority. While we are talking about what to do, the British, as the five peregrinating Senators discovered, are doing it.

Obligation To Serve

Inevitably the President's proposal of national service for the Nation has come in for criticism. Mr. Roosevelt has invited it by his procrastination. To be sure, conditions today are better from the standpoint of manpower. There is no labor shortage for the munitioning tasks still to do, nor is there any lack of the materials necessary to win this war. But things are decidedly worse from the standpoint of morale. The schism that has arisen between the home front and the fighting front can be attested from any editor's mailbag and from conversations with any returning serviceman. It is not enough answer to the men from abroad to say that the men in the factories have "passed a miracle." What the fighting men see is business-as-usual, politics-as-usual, selfishness-as-usual. It is this kind of thing that is bound progressively to lower our national morale and to accentuate a cleavage in our society when the men come back for good. Thus for postwar's sake as well as for the war's sake national service is desirable. In common fairness to our fighting forces the Nation must put itself on a par with them in the obligation to serve.

The form that a national service bill takes will naturally invite criticism when the time comes to discuss it. But it is the idea of national service that bothers many persons in Congress, and, of course, the representatives of organized labor. These latter repeat the parrot-cry that national service is a servitude and thus is unconstitutional. Surely the same objection could be applied to the Selective Service system. To paraphrase the President, what is constitutional for one is constitutional for the other. Constitutional power in this respect flows from Article 1, Section 8, whereby Congress is given authority "to raise and support armies." Our armies obviously need material support, and, in the light of events of the last six months, they likewise need moral support. It is questionable whether new powers conferred by a National Service Act would have to be exercised extensively and immediately. It is our guess that, in the light of our progress so far, there would be little change. But the fact that legal powers existed to keep people on the job—and the exodus of officeholders from Washington is the handwriting on the wall as to prospects generally in the absence of national service legislation—should be sufficient to keep them on the job. This, at any rate, has been proved by British experience. In our case, where we have sought to bring sanctions to bear on the working population, the acts in so far as they have been undertaken by the War Manpower Commission have been timid, more or less ineffective, and extra-constitutional.

French Renascence

The French—we refer, of course, to those Frenchmen under the leadership of Gen. Charles de Gaulle—want to play a part in the Allied invasion of Europe. This is a not altogether unnatural desire, since the liberation of their own fatherland is one of the avowed objectives of the invasion. Indeed, the soil of France may well be the principal battleground. But the leaders recognized by the French are only dimly discerned as poor relations by the British and ourselves. They have not even been consulted in planning the attack. Their guerilla patriots within the enemy-occupied area have not been included in the determination of strategy. Even the arming of French fighters has been attended by what General de Gaulle characterized the other day as "painful, dolorous negotiations."

Poor relations are notoriously ungrateful for benefactions conferred upon them. The French, apparently, are not satisfied to have us uplift them. They want to uplift themselves. Perhaps it is precisely because General de Gaulle shares this aspiration of his countrymen that he commands their confidence to a greater degree than any Frenchman more disposed to lean upon the kindness of the Allies. He represents the pride as well as the hope of the French people. And he is bringing about the renascence of France despite the blind failure of American diplomacy to see that this renascence is in progress.

But we are not merely ignoring this renascence. We are, in fact, actively opposing it on the ground that it is not authentic. Ceaselessly, moreover, our anonymous policy-makers are funneling through their favorite correspondents the legend that De Gaulle wants to impose a dictatorship on France, as if the French after this war would stand for either a dictatorship or a military administration. The effect of our curious policy has been not merely to leave the French ungrateful but to make them actually hostile. In a recent dispatch to the New York Herald Tribune from Algiers, Miss Sonia Tomara, an able and respected reporter, declared that, "Since I've been here I've never ceased to hear complaints about Americans and recriminations against them . . . We have made a mistake. To say it plainly we have backed the wrong horse and we are now in a false position."

There is simply no way of extricating ourselves from this false position save by acknowledging our mistake and embracing a frank change of policy. This will entail, in the first place, an ungrudging acceptance of the French National Committee and General de Gaulle as the de facto representatives of modern France in the light of the new program providing for representative government which has just come out of Algiers. None of the recognized governments-in-exile has a representative assembly back of it, as has the unrecognized French Committee under De Gaulle's chairmanship. In the second place, it will require the presence of a Frenchman on the Advisory Committee on European Affairs—now managed exclusively by non-European nations, Britain, Russia and the United States. Thirdly, it will call for the fullest cooperation with Algiers in the invasion and pacification of France. We shall want, and need, the friendship of France in postwar affairs. Since we have not been able to make her a dependent on our bounty, we would do well at least to make her a partner and an ally. The gain will more than offset the loss of face suffered by this Administration.

VERNON RIVER

Flat under the bowl of sky
Spread the yellow marshes
Lacquered in the gold light
Of afternoon.

Reaches
The day westward to the night.
Still on the water the high tide
Floods and the moving flight
Of gulls is checked.

Beside
The quiet river the wharves gleam
Whitely out of barnacles and shells
Covering the weathered piers.

High over the water the moon
Rises palely from its dream
Of dawn.

Here from its noon
Has the day fallen and it sleeps.

America At War

By Selden Menefee

On Postwar Policy

THOSE WHO oppose a strong American postwar policy of cooperation with other nations are doomed to disappointment at some recent, but little publicized, results of public opinion polls.

Not only is the use of the word "sovereignty" as a nationalistic scare word falling pretty flat, but also Americans continue to express full confidence in their allies, regardless of widespread criticisms directed against them.

Almost four out of five of us believe that after this war we should take a more active part in world affairs, according to a recent statement by Dr. Jerome Bruner of the Office of Public Opinion Research; and we hold to this view even when the most potent arguments in the kitbag of the isolationists are thrown our way.

When those who favor "taking an active part" are reminded that this might be quite expensive, nearly 85 per cent of them stick to their guns. And when the old cliche about "entangling alliances" was trotted out for the benefit of the remainder, 80 per cent still held to their original convictions.

Question of "Sovereignty"

The question of "sovereignty," which has been raised time and again as a rallying point for opponents of postwar international collaboration, is just as effective. For Americans, sovereignty is a relative thing. Once we are convinced that our national security is endangered, the scare word loses much of its emotional strength.

The question of an international police force is a good illustration of this. Three-fourths of us are convinced that such a step is necessary. Of this majority, 60 per cent favor a police force larger than the armed forces of the United States; 20 per cent think it should be smaller and the remainder are undecided.

When questioned as to where an international police force should be used, only 9 per cent of its proponents say that the Axis countries alone should be policed, and another 11 per cent would include only Axis and occupied nations. The great majority—80 per cent—are willing to allow all nations, specifically including the United States, to come under the scope of the policing plan.

Here is little evidence that "infringement of sovereignty" is greatly feared. At least, the danger of future aggression is feared much more.

Perhaps a main source of our strong feeling of internationalism is based on our growing belief that future wars can be prevented. A year ago only 25 per cent of the public thought that we "will be able to end all wars between nations," while 58 per cent expressed the belief that "there will always be big wars."

But a recent poll by the National Opinion Research Center showed that 52 per cent of the people were convinced that a union of nations would have a "good chance" of preventing wars, and 38 per cent more believed it stood a "fair chance" of doing so.

Such optimism may be a result of the belief that the United Nations will stay united after the war. At the close of the year NORC asked its cross-section of the public, "Do you think all three countries will stick to the (Moscow) agreements after the war?"

Seven Out of Ten

A third of those responding either did not know about the conference or had no opinions. But of the others, 7 out of 10 said "Yes."

Of the total cross-section only 3 per cent thought that the United States might fail in its obligations, 10 per cent thought that Great Britain might fail, and 22 per cent expressed misgivings about Russia.

The small amount of antagonism toward Great Britain is particularly noteworthy in view of recent criticism of the British. This has been focused around the Indian famine, the premature news release on the Cairo Conference by Reuters (which antagonized the press), and the reported recalcitrance of Churchill at the same conference. More recently, the unofficial report that 73 per cent of the armed forces in the coming invasion would be Americans has been exploited by Nazi propagandists to create antagonism.

Yet, at last reports, little more than a month ago, an OPOR poll showed that only one American in six thought the British were not "doing all they possibly can to win the war." At no time in the past, as far as available information shows, had distrust of the British been at a lower ebb.

Americans are prone to criticize their allies as well as their own Government. But the public's underlying confidence in the stability of United Nations relationships is affected very little thereby.

Telling St. Peter

The Post has been coming to our home for over fifty-five years, to my mother, my brother, and then to me. I regard it as a part of my legal inheritance, certainly it is a household necessity. Its fearless independence, and thorough reliability is deeply valued.

For many years it has been to me helpful, informative and entertaining. Now that I have passed my "three score years and ten" it is not probable that I will remain much longer on your mailing list, but so long as I am here I want The Post. When I reach the Beyond, and wish to especially emphasize some fact, I will say to St. Peter, "I saw it in The Washington Post."

Russia And Poland

By Barnet Nover

Soviet Policy Examined

THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT'S declaration of January 11 on Russian-Polish relations throws light on a good deal more than that tangled and thorny problem. It also provides us with some revealing clews regarding Russia's postwar policy.

Up to now the position taken by the major Allied powers regarding postwar frontiers is that such controversial problems should be kept on the shelf since their premature discussion might tend to split the ranks of the United Nations. That has certainly been the view of the United States and, to a large extent, of Great Britain as well. It is now apparent that it is not the view of Russia.

THE WAR IS APPROACHING its most critical stage. Unity among the United Nations is more imperative than ever. Yet it is precisely at this moment that Russia has seen fit to come forward with precise claims regarding the border she wants to see established between her and Poland as well as with fairly specific proposals regarding the border that is to separate Poland and Germany.

Why the haste? The answer would seem to be, and the text of the Soviet declaration of January 11 bears this out, that Russia has views regarding the future territorial organization of Europe which she is determined to put into force without outside interference.

In other words, while Russia is prepared to participate in an international system for the maintenance of peace, a system approved in principle at the Moscow and Teheran conferences, she is determined that before this system comes into full force the broad lines of the European settlement, particularly in the east, should already have been laid.

CERTAINLY in its insistence on the addition to the Soviet domain of territory which between 1920 and 1939 Russia recognized as Polish, the Soviet government is not being motivated by land hunger. If there is one thing Russia does not lack it is living space.

Nor is it reasonable to assume that in announcing its determination to annex a large part of Eastern Poland the Kremlin is moved by strategic considerations. It was not the buffer of Eastern Poland which saved Russia following the German invasion but the endless distances of the Soviet Union, the bravery and hardihood of her people, the military skill of her generals and, last but not least, the crucial assistance she received from Great Britain and the United States.

Similarly, the argument can be dismissed that Russia's interest in the Ukrainian and Volhynian regions of Poland is primarily enthnographic—the fact that those regions contain large numbers of people similar to those living on the Russian side of the border.

The Russians are far too realistic to believe that the presence in Poland of five million Ukrainians (assuming that many are still alive after the mass executions carried out by the Nazis) can serve as a magnet capable of weaning the Russian Ukraine from the Soviet Union.

THE REAL PURPOSE behind Russia's frontier policy in Poland is political. Russia wants no state along her western borders that is large enough and strong enough to have an international policy of its own, as Poland did after Versailles.

By pushing the Soviet borders west to the so-called Curzon line, Russian frontiers would march along with those of Hungary and Czechoslovakia, as well as with those of Poland and Rumania. She would thus be in a position to put direct pressure on all those countries.

Furthermore, by offering to compensate Poland in the west—at the expense of Germany—for the loss of territory in the east—Russia would insure a permanent state of hostility between Germany and Poland. Instead of being able to balance herself more or less effectively between Germany and Russia, as she did in the post-Versailles era, Poland would then be dependent for her security on Russia. Indeed, she would have no alternative but to accept the offer advanced by Moscow that Poland become a signatory to the Russian-Czechoslovak treaty of alliance.

BUT PERHAPS the most ominous aspect of the Soviet declaration of January 11 and subsequent statements regarding Poland that have emanated from Russia is the implied argument that only a Polish government prepared to do Russia's bidding will be regarded by the Kremlin as a "friendly" government.

Apparently, the fact that both Great Britain and the United States, and for that matter all the other United Nations except Russia, recognize that government as the legitimate government of Poland, at least until the Polish people themselves have been liberated, does not cut any ice with Russia.

At Moscow and Teheran Russia gave eloquent lip service to the principle of collective action, Russia is now revealing that in matters that concern her directly she insists on playing a lone hand. It is not an auspicious augury for the future.

Soldier's Christmas Eve

I had never seen so much mud in all my life. I was smeared from head to foot. I was cold, wet and weary. "Jerry" was near us, but no one knew just where or when we would see him. I crouched in a rain-soaked slit trench with nothing but a lizard for companionship and was beginning to feel that I was the unhappiest and loneliest man in the world. It was Christmas Eve!

Suddenly the rain stopped and a strong wind began to blow the clouds away, leaving a magnificent ceiling of stars. I heard a movement behind me, and looking up saw a soldier slide down by my side. I didn't know who he was because in those muddy days no one could recognize anyone else in the darkness. He looked like a shadow.

"Mine's Ted," he said. "Merry Christmas!" "Merry Christmas?" I queried, somewhat sourly, "Are you crazy?" "I hope not," he replied, "but tell me, have you ever spent Christmas Eve in a more heavenly spot?" I was so disgusted I didn't even bother to look at him. But he continued, "Well, come then, tell me how you spent your Christmas before the war." This was something I was glad to talk about, so I went into great detail—boasting about parties of champagne, beautiful girls and dancing. "Ah, yes," he said when I had finished, "that must have been fun, but tell me, do you remember what the true story of Christmas really is? According to the good book it's not a tale of champagne, beautiful girls or dancing. It is a story of stars and men who believe in them; of wisdom and angels and of Christ being born. Look at the sky above you. If we had the wisdom and strength to follow those stars would they not lead us to our Christ? You will remember that the wise men were happy, but that their whole voyage to the newborn Child was made in doubt and uncertainty. Such thoughts these days never shadow our movements for we know our Christ is born, we are sure of what He represents, and we are close to Him. Heaven knows we need Him now more than ever before."

He had finished speaking. He began wiping his rifle off on the sleeve of his jacket. I felt so full of strange warm things inside that I thought I must be dreaming. "Mine's Al," I said, "Merry Christmas!—and thanks." He smiled and was gone as quietly as he had come.

I no longer felt unhappy or lonely.

"Dear Lord," I prayed, "when this war is over and I leave these surroundings for the comforts that peace will bring me, please don't let me forget what it's like to be near to You. May I always remember the true meaning of Christmas —not just for one day, but throughout all the days of the year. May I always have the comfort in my heart and the peace of mind and soul that my belief in You brings. May I find You, forever, in my prayers. Amen."

I was still covered with mud from head to foot, but I had forgotten that I was wet and cold. The stars were still shining brighter than ever. I couldn't help thinking to myself, "What a truly heavenly Christmas this is."

Sneak Attack

I have three sons. One has recently returned "up the line" after having been hospitalized for the second time as the result of a wound received in action on a PT-boat. The second is ill in Sydney with malaria contracted while on a merchant ship delivering goods to the combat areas. The third is a GI Joe. I have a brother in New Guinea. One nephew is in the Marines, two on destroyers, one on an aircraft carrier, one has volunteered for submarine duty.

None of these men use alcohol to excess, but all of them would bitterly resent the resurrection, behind their backs, of the evils of the prohibition era. They cannot speak for themselves and I feel it my duty to protest for them.

If ever there was a sneak attack this is it and, to make it worse, it is based on the exploitation of devotion and patriotism, the excuse of "protecting" the men in uniform. Those men are doing a pretty good job of protecting us. I think they can be trusted to take care of themselves.

We women at home can't do much for our fighting men, but those who have relatives overseas who would oppose this legislation can, at least, in their name, register that opposition by writing Representative Celler, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C. who is leading the fight against this bill.

The most effective protest, however, would come from those in uniform. Any who can should write or wire their own Congressmen or Mr. Celler protesting the enactment of a prohibition law. The drys are said to have a campaign fund of $10,000,000. Show them the Army and Navy of the United States can't be sold down the river. CITIZEN.

Washington, Jan. 9.

Erratum: A letter published on this page yesterday and signed by Lieut. R. E. Houston, USNR, contained the phrase: "As a very important member of the United States Navy." The word important should have read unimportant.

Victims Of Japan

CONSIDERING THE record the Japanese have made for themselves in territories which they have occupied, newspaper readers might well be excused for lifting their eyebrows at reports that the Japanese have lately been showing greater respect for the local customs and traditions of conquered peoples. The change is easily explained. Recent reports from occupied territories make it clear that the "more liberal" attitude of the Japanese is actually nothing more than an attempt to use existing religious feelings for the benefit of Japan.

In the Island of Celebes, "Christian Service Corps" have been formed, which the Japanese described in their broadcasts as a federation of "more than 1 Christian sects, embracing a total of at least 1000 churches." The official explanation for the formation of this federation is that it was necessary because "these churches have been political instruments in the hands of Great Britain and the United States." This gives away the preoccupation of the Japanese which is to make their "Christian Service Corps" a political instrument in their own hands.

This is not, as a matter of fact, a new idea for the Japanese. The plan of converting Christianity to serve their own purposes was outlined some time ago. Unlike the Western peoples, who consider cultural propaganda as of secondary importance, the Japanese put it first, believing that it is more effective and more permanent in its results than political propaganda.

Christian Followers

Knowing how many followers Christianity has in the Far East, the Japanese prefer, instead of attacking it from the front and expressing a philosophy hostile to their own, to attempt to infiltrate it, to turn the force of its emotional content to their own ideas. This is an objective in which they have succeeded in the past; for they had already taken the gentle, tolerant religion of Buddhism, and grafted onto it the ideology of their own harsh Shinto doctrine.

That is what the Japanese propose to do with the religion which they are now meeting in their new territories. They will not attempt to combat directly whatever religion may be prevalent in any area, but instead will try to attach to it the Shinto dogma that Japan was created with a special "heavenly task," and that the Japanese Emperor as the lineal descendant of the Sun Goddess, is entrusted with carrying out the "mandate of heaven."

Japanese writers have already attempted to portray Christ as a Shinto priest. The Gospels give few details about His life between the ages of 12 and 30 during which He went to Egypt and Nazareth. These Japanese theologians therefore filled in this period by alleging that His travels took him much farther than to Egypt; that, indeed, He went to India, and was there initiated into Shinto teachings.

Prof. Chikao Fujisawa, Japan's cultural master mind, explains that Western theologians have misconstrued the nature of God as taught by Christ, and therefore Christianity as at present preached by them is doomed. "To survive," he writes, "it has to be infused with the fresh life stream of the way of the gods. This fresh life stream, he has discovered, can be infused by replacing the idea of democracy with that of theocracy—rule by God, that is, the representative of godhead on earth being, of course, the Emperor of Japan and the Japanese, consequently the interpreters of the way in which God desires that men should be ruled.

Twisting Religions

The Japanese are prepared to twist any religions whatsoever to their purposes in this fashion. In the middle of October, broadcasts from Tokyo announced a three-day conference at Soerabaya, Java, of "various Christian communities, with the purpose of discussing stronger cooperation with other religious bodies." Another broadcast said about the same time stated that 250,000 Christian natives of the island of Amboina had held "a conference for the realization of national service."

On December 7, 1943, on which a Moslem feast fell, the Japanese ordered Mahometans in the Netherlands East Indies to celebrate the attack on Pearl Harbor jointly with their religious ceremonies. With more than 100,000,000 followers of Islam now living in territories controlled by Tokyo, the Japanese are pursuing the same tactics for them as for the Christians, handling religious sensibilities with kid gloves, but working unceasingly to turn devotion into their own channels.

This may sound innocent enough, but the Tenno idea is the concept that the Japanese Emperor is of heavenly origin.

Last August the Japanese formed a "Cultural Research Society" in Bali to promote "advanced culture" among the Balinese, "who for centuries have been influenced by superstitions derived from a special branch of Hinduism." Hitherto, the Balinese had been left free to follow their rites, derived from Hinduism at a period long before the advent of Mohammedanism into India. Now they, too, are to be led by the Japanese away from the false form of Hinduism to its true meaning. And what is the pure doctrine, the unaltered essence of the Hindu religion?

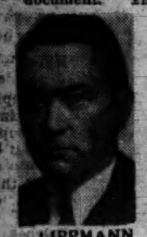
Why, that the Japanese Emperor is a god, of course.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

"A Campaign Document"

A REPUBLICAN Congressman declared at once that the President's message is "a campaign document." The Congressman might pause and reflect on what he has said.



LIPPMANN

He has said that Mr. Roosevelt has chosen as a platform in a political year the following planks: That taxes shall be raised; that wages shall not be raised; that prices shall not be raised; that profits shall be limited; that every able-bodied man and woman shall be made liable for national service.

These proposals violate all the known rules of politics which, as everyone knows, are that taxes must not be increased in an election year, that the way to win votes is to be in favor of increasing the wages, the prices, and the profits of the largest number of organized pressure groups, and finally that the voters must be treated as long-suffering individuals who may expect much from the Government but have no duty to inconvenience themselves.

Our Congressman is, therefore, saying that Mr. Roosevelt thinks it is good politics in the year 1944 to propose the very things which no other politician has ever regarded as anything but straight political suicide.

NOW HOW shall we explain this extraordinary performance? We all know that Mr. Roosevelt is just about the shrewdest and most successful practical politician of our time. Nobody has ever doubted that. He may be, and indeed he is, an administrator who cannot resist producing three headaches when one headache would be quite enough; who when he needs a suit of clothes will find three tailors will tell each of them to make one leg of the trousers, will let each of them guess which leg he is working on, and will then appoint a fourth tailor to coordinate the trousers. But that Mr. Roosevelt knows American politics is not to be denied.

If, then, this message is Mr. Roosevelt's idea of a campaign document, certain things follow: Mr. Roosevelt must think that the great majority of the American people would wish to do any sensible thing which they believe will hasten the victory and will prevent this war from ending, as all other wars have ended, in a chaos of unemployment and crazy prices and bad money. He must think that, painful as it now seems to vote taxes, to hold down wages and prices and profits, and to call the voters for national service, by next autumn it may be very awkward, even politically dangerous, for a public man not to have been recorded in favor of these measures. (This Congressman has colleagues who are hoping that no one will remember that over the years they have rarely been recorded in favor of measures which might have prevented this war, of measures to be prepared for it.)

WHEN THE votes are cast next autumn, they will express the feelings of the people not on what routine politicians now think the people think now but on what are the conditions then. And by next autumn, as the President and Commander in Chief has better reason to know than anyone else, the war will be at its climax. Ten million men will be in arms, and that 10 million will have behind them here at home their families and their friends; for all of them the quickest, surest, and least costly ending of the war must outweigh any consideration of money, of their civilian privileges, or of their personal convenience. In short, when the young manhood of the Nation is living dangerously and heroically, the best part of the Nation may judge the politicians by what they did to win the war, rather than by what they did to cater to selfishness, laziness, and self-indulgence.

The usual rules of political behavior may not work at a time when so many Americans are doing such unusual things as storming the coasts of Europe and fighting in the jungles of New Guinea. If the Congressman is right that this message is a campaign document, he ought then to ask himself whether perchance it may not be a good campaign document. It would not be the first time in this war that a program of victory by blood, sweat, and tears has proved to be a better way of retaining the people's confidence than a menu of pap, applesauce, and eyewash.

IN ANY event now that the Congressman has found out what is Mr. Roosevelt's campaign document, it is time that he began playing the same kind of politics. He might find that it is very good politics. And he might also find a certain satisfaction in it—the satisfaction, when the stakes are life and death not money and votes, of not stooping to the meaner natures of men but of doing his duty. That might be a durable satisfaction to find in these days which our descendants will remember long after they have forgotten who carried the Twelfth Congressional District.

Two Battling U-Boats Sunk By U. S. Planes

By H. K. Reynolds
International News Service Staff Writer

In an account of the destruction of two German submarines by American air action in the South Atlantic, the Navy Department disclosed last night that the increased antiaircraft armament of the U-boats has failed to give them adequate protection against sustained and determined bombing attacks.

Installation of more and heavier antiaircraft guns on their submarines was one of the countermeasures adopted by the Germans a few months ago when their mounting submarine losses caused consternation among U-boat crews and swept the commerce raiders away from the main Atlantic shipping lanes.

Describing successful battles with two U-boats in the vicinity of Ascension Island, the Navy revealed that the German antiaircraft fire was intense and accurate but failed to deter the American bombers.

In one of the engagements, a Navy Liberator was damaged by the U-boat guns and narrowly escaped diving into the sea, but stuck to the attack until the enemy ship was blown to pieces by bombs.

Six American planes, including two Army bombers, took part in the first battle which lasted five and a half hours. Seven attacks were made by Liberators, which dropped 33 depth bombs, and machine-gunned the submarine several times. In addition, the two Army planes dropped 10 demolition bombs.

The U-boat's antiaircraft guns finally were silenced by close-range strafing.

"He can really throw it up here," one of the American pilots, flying a B-25 Mitchell, radioed as he flew into the submarine's flak.

The pilot credited with the kill was Lieut. Samuel K. Taylor, jr., of Whitesburg, Tenn.

"The triumphant Navy plane which actually sank the Nazi submarine," said the Navy's account of the battle, "exhausted its ammunition and was running low on its gas supply; returned to its base, refueled and rearmed, and moved again into combat to give the U-boat its final death blow . . .

"There were no casualties to American personnel, but the Germans suffered heavily."

The second U-boat, sunk a few weeks later, was destroyed by a Navy unit under Lieut. Marion Vance Dawkins, Sumter, N. C., who dropped bombs from about 5200 feet. The U-boat was enveloped in a large detonation, but its gunners went into action as the American plane passed over its conning tower and scored hits. Dawkins felt loss of control in his rudders and the nose dropped badly, but he managed to right the plane and was closing in to take photographs when the U-boat, then a mile away, exploded and sank.

Jett Nominated For Seven-Year Term on FCC

Ewell K. Jett, chief engineer of the Federal Communications Commission and a native of Maryland, was nominated by President Roosevelt yesterday as a commissioner of the FCC for a seven-year-term. He will fill the vacancy created when the renomination of George Henry Payne was withdrawn without explanation two days after it had been sent to the Senate last July.

Jett is a retired Navy officer who rose from the ranks and is a technical radio expert. Although he was appointed in place of a former Republican member of the commission, "Who's Who" lists no political affiliation for the nominee.

Jett has grown up with radio. Enlisting in the Navy in 1911 he entered the service radio school and radio has been his major interest since.

Loaned By Navy

Before he became associated with the FCC, he had been loaned by the Navy Department to the Federal Radio Commission, predecessor of the FCC. He retired from the Navy, in which he served during World War I, in 1919.

Lieut. Jett has served as a delegate and technical adviser in United States delegations to radio conferences, where vital decisions in the communication field were made, at Cairo, Bucharest, Havana, Mexico City, Santiago, and Ottawa.

Recently Jett has been chairman of the Interdepartmental Radio Advisory Committee and also chairman of the coordinating committee of the Board of War Communications, which works with some 17 committees set up by, and in, the radio industry.

Born in Baltimore in 1893, the FCC nominee now lives at 6305 Hillcrest pl., Chevy Chase, Md. He is married and has two daughters, Mrs. Joseph Burke, and Mrs. John E. Bruce.

By the Associated Press

The Special House Committee investigating the Federal Communications Commission will question J. Edgar Hoover, FBI head, probably late this week, on the degree of cooperation given the Federal Bureau of Investigation by FCC Chairman James L. Fly.

Eugene Garey, committee counsel, said Hoover would be asked for his views on reports given to the committee some time ago that Fly proposed to turn over to the FBI for investigation the commission's file of fingerprints of merchant marine radio operators.

Whether the committee would inquire at this time into the factors involving the retirement of Rear Admiral Stanford C. Hooper as head of the Navy's Communications Bureau, Garey said, has not been determined. Testimony given the committee during hearings last year, Garey said, indicated that Fly was instrumental in having Hooper retired.

9 Nominations

Vice Admiral Rank Asked For Bagley

Rear Admiral David W. Bagley of Raleigh, N. C., who will become west sea frontier commander, with headquarters at San Francisco February 1, was nominated by President Roosevelt yesterday to the rank of vice admiral.

At the same time the President recommended to the Senate that Vice Admiral John W. Greenslade of Washington, whom Admiral Bagley will succeed, be placed on the retired list with the rank of vice admiral.

Mr. Roosevelt also nominated Capt. Frederick G. Crisp of Baltimore, Md., who recently was named head of the Navy Department's new division of shore establishments and civilian personnel here, to be a rear admiral.

Other naval officers nominated to be rear admirals, with their usual home addresses, were Capt. William M. Fechteler, 3507 Livingston ave., Washington; Commodore Henry S. Hendall, Washington; Capt. Frank L. Lowe, Pine Bluff, Ark.; and Capt. John J. Ballentine, Hillsboro, Ohio.

Capt. James E. Boak of Hughesville, Pa., and Capt. George R. Henderson, Pawtucket, R. I., were nominated to be commodores.

Archibald Cox Named Labor Solicitor Aide

Archibald Cox of Weston, Mass., has been appointed associate solicitor of the Labor Department, that agency announced yesterday. He formerly was in the Office of Foreign Economic Coordination of the State Department.

WPB Plans To Free Steel For 543 Items

By Watson Fenimore
International News Service Staff Writer

The War Production Board's steel division, it was learned last night, will recommend today the lifting of the ban against use of iron and steel in 543 civilian products.

The recommendation will be made to the WPB clearance committee at a special meeting and will take the form of a move to change the dractic WPB order M-126, which was issued in May, 1942.

That order forbids the use of iron and steel in making 646 specific items, and was promulgated when those metals were highly critical on the Nation's supply list.

Today's recommendation is expected to encounter bitter opposition from the military services representatives on the clearance committee, but acceptance of it would be good news to consumers.

If the recommended change is approved, steel and iron will be allowed for the manufacture of a host of items ranging from bird cages, builders' supplies, locks and and lunch boxes to phonograph recording blanks, garden tools, skewers' stoves and refrigerator containers and trays.

Only 103 items would remain on the steel black list, WPB sources said, and these would be retained only to keep the general order alive in case some war emergency arises in the future to make steel a critical metal once more.

The 103 articles [illegible] are to remain will include cigar and cigarette holders, compacts, cigar clippers, Christmas tree holders and other "less essential" goods, a WPB spokesman said.

Even these, however, may be removed from the list, the spokesman said, if a manufacturer has labor and facilities for their production.

WPB authorities emphasized, however, that simply taking articles off the steel black list does not guarantee their immediate manufacture because other factors such as shortages of parts, other metals, labor and facilities for production must be considered.

America's First Victory Ship Is Launched at Kaiser Yards

Portland, Oreg., Jan. 12 (AP)—The Nation's first Victory ship, one of the freighters expected to form the backbone of the United States' postwar merchant fleet, was launched here today.

In a half-hour ceremony at the Henry J. Kaiser-operated Oregon Shipbuilding Corp., the Nation's champion producer of Liberty vessels, the ship was christened "United Victory" by Mrs. Thomas Beck, wife of the president of the Crowell-Collier Publishing Co.

Oregon Celebrates

All Oregon observed the event. Gov. Earl Snell proclaimed this "United Victory Day" and urged "full appreciation of what this means to our war effort" and to postwar plans.

Just what it means is shown in Maritime Commission figures. The Victory is more rakish, faster. It carries the same amount of cargo, but produces almost three times as much power, turning up 15 knots and better in speed, compared to the Liberty's 11.

The Victory ship consequently will dare to sail without convoy protection. It will hake the round trip to Poland in three weeks, where the Liberty takes nine.

Construction Slower

Only in construction will tbe Victory be slower. One Liberty here was completed in 13 days. Normal time was closer to 30 days.

The United Victory was on the ways 54 days. It will be 30 to 40 days more before competion. But the new ship is a more intricate piece of construction and the yard will not be fully converted to its production until three more Liberty vessels are launched. Eventually officials expect to reduce the time to 50 days per ship.

The result will be a huge fleet of modern freighters. Oregon shipbuilding alone has a contract for 105 of them.

Root Out Naziism, Halifax Urges, or 'We'll Fight Again'

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 12 (INS).—Unless the "roots" of naziism and of Japanese militarism are destroyed "we are fighting in vain and we shall have to fight again" Britain's Ambassador to the United States, Lord Halifax, warned tonight. At a joint meeting of the Association of American Colleges, the National Conference of Church-Related Colleges and the American Association of Junior Colleges in Cincinnati, Lord Halifax said:

"It is idle to suppose that the experience of defeat by itself will effect a miraculous and lasting conversion; or that the danger can be wholly or permanently met by frontier adjustments, or by military occupations, or by economic controls.

"The roots have gone too deep," the British envoy declared solemnly, "and unless we can destroy this evil at its roots we are fighting in vain and shall have to fight again."

Lord Halifax said there is no difference between the fascism of Germany and militarism of the Japanese.

Harper Heads Capital Credit Men's Group

By S. Oliver Goodman

R. M. Harper was elected president of the Washington Association of Credit Men, succeeding Lewis W. Magruder whose term expired. Harry L. Beach was elected vice president and the following directors were chosen for a two-year term: S. K. Cartwright, Alfred W. Gardiner, H. M. Johnson, Fred Perry, Marion Reading and W. C. Vernon.

Mr. Harper, a native of Leesburg, Va., is credit manager of the Smoot Sand & Gravel Corp. He has been vice president of the association for past year and one of its directors for many years. He is a member of the Washington Board of Trade.

In other elections here all officers were reelected yesterday by the Second National Bank, National Metropolitan Bank, National Capital Bank, Industrial Band; Washington Loan & Trust Company and the Home Building Association. Stockholders of the latter two likewise reelected all directors.

Washington Loan & Trust directors at the same time declared a quarterly dividend of 2 per cent and an extra dividend of the same amount, payable February 1 to stockholders of record January 22.

Shareholders of the Home Building Association were informed that assets now exceed $1,022,000 and the association has purchased for its own portfolio $60,000 of Government bonds.

Key Securities Continue Drop On Tax Fears

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Stock market leaders declined fractions to around a point today on a continuation of the selling movement which started in the previous session after publication of President Roosevelt's message to Congress.

Out of later study of the document Wall Street seemed to become apprehensive that enactment of a "realistic tax law", as requested by the President might put a large dent in corporation profits.

The general run of key issues closed near the day's lows, but the final hour was marked by active bidding for a few gold mines and specialties.

Stocks down a point or more included Sears Roebuck, Oliver Farm, and duPont. Off major fractions were Bethlehem Steel, Goodrich, U. S. Rubber, Case, Allied Chemical and Santa Fe.

Homestake, Dome Mines, United Corp. preferred and Johns-Manville had gains running to more than a point.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite was down .2 of a point at 50.5. At yesterday's finish the average, despite the market's late sell-off, was the highest since November 1. Of the 877 separate issues traded 473 declined, 204 advanced and 200 were unchanged.

Bonds were irregular. Chicago wheat closed unchanged to up ⅛ cent a bushel. Hogs were unchanged. Cotton futures rose 20 to 35 cents a bale.

UAL Preferred Stock Offered

A group of underwriters headed by Harriman Ripley & Co., Inc., will offer publicly today 27,272 shares of 4½ per cent cumulative perferred stock of United Air Lines, Inc., at $100 a share. The stock represents the unsubscribed portion of an issue of 105,032 shares, which had been offered to common stockholders.

N. Y. Bonds

Total bond sales yesterday, $17,403,400; previous day, $15,526,200; week ago, $17,202,500.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

That was an amazing disclosure by Secretary of the Navy Knox the other night, when, speaking to the Touchdown Club, he pointed out "the frightening lesson that has been forced upon us by this war, in which we learned that only one in five of our young men could meet the physical standards of the United States Marines."

POVICH

Secretary Knox revealed also, that 50 per cent of the men called up could not qualify, physically, for any branch of the service "and that means," he said, "they couldn't defend their own freedom when it was challenged." Thus he justified the Navy's elaborate program of athletics by painting the dreary picture of America's physical fitness at the outbreak of the war.

The Navy chief cited the chief defects as poor vision, obstruction of the nasal passages, lack of chest development and unsound feet, "all from the cause of our neglect in ignoring these ailments in their infancy. The crucial task of taking corrective measures so that we will ever be ready to defend our freedom in the future, confronts us after the war is over."

There is a direct relationship between physical condition and physical courage, he pointed out, "and the lessons our boys have learned on the fields of sports is of the highest importance to them now."

If only as a sounding board for the vigorous sort of lecture delivered by Mr. Knox, the Touchdown Club has made an important contribution to the war effort. The Navy Secretary spoke from a banquet hall where the headline athletes of the year were being feted, and as a consequence he had a radio audience of millions to which a coast-to-coast network carried his important message.

The show the Touchdown Club staged couldn't be bought. Only at the Cairo and Teheran conferences of Roosevelt, Churchill, Stalin and Kai-shek were as many high personages of military importance present. These four-star generals were on the speakers' dais. Admirals with enough gold on their sleeves to make them appear as if they had dipped their arms into deep bowls of egg-yolk, were a dime a dozen.

It was a party where a Marine Corps private, Angelo Bertelli, could talk to generals. In one group he was surrounded by big-shot army and marine officers who totaled 14 stars.

The 1,000 members and guests who wedged their way into the Statler's vast Embassy Room saw a glittering parade of the men who are running this war for the United States on the battlefields and at sea. It was a priceless evening. The man they must have liked best was Admiral William "Bud" Halsey, commander of the air battle forces of the Pacific Fleet.

They know now why Halsey is called the Fighting Admiral, and how, like every other man who has come back from the Pacific, he despises the Japs. Admiral Halsey sounded the high note of the night, the kind of a speech they wanted to hear and which made them gasp when they heard it. It was a brief talk which was short-waved to "our fighting men of all our forces all over the world who are up against the predatory and godless gangsters."

"And especially to my fighting team of the South Pacific, I want to send my congratulations," said Admiral Halsey, "on what you are doing to those 'Yellow Monkeys', and I want you to continue making them good Japs." Nobody could miss the point.

Only in Washington could a sports organization stage the kind of a party that was tossed by the Touchdown Club the other night. In no other city could it be duplicated, because no other city could muster the important people now in Washington. In its eighth year, the fame of the Touchdown Club is national.

Following Secretary Knox's appeal for corrective measures to help the Nation's youth combat their physical ailments before they took too deep root, he must have been heartened when Touchdown Club President Bob Simmons drew from his pocket a check for $5000, and presented it to the Metropolitan Police Boys Clubs of Washington. Here was concrete help of the kind Knox had asked.

At future Touchdown Club banquets, we fear you'll almost have to be "in the know" to get a ticket to the party.

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Jan. 12.—The most remarkable response we've had to a newspaper piece in 15 years of sportswriting has come from a recent article about William E. Porter's proposal for a national lottery.

CONSIDINE

Sure, it's old stuff, and a lot of good men have fought for it without result. But if the mail is any criterion—and it always is—there is a lustiest, kind of interest in this country in a lottery along the lines suggested by Porter.

Porter is convinced that if a law-abiding lottery were staged in this country, with three annual drawings on the Rose Bowl game, the Kentucky Derby and the World Series, that 50 million tickets would be sold each year.

He estimates that the State and Federal Treasuries would raise one billion dollars a year in additional revenue. For prizes he suggests 1000 $5000 homes, plus $1000 a year for five years to each of the thousand winners. He would have that kind of payoff after each drawing. He would also see that lottery jobs were sold only through such official outlets as the Postoffice Department, and he would give returning war veterans first crack at the many, many jobs which would arise out of such legislation.

He'd give the States a percentage of the money invested in those States, as well as a commission to the ticket sellers. He believes that the lottery would help win the war, enable the Government and States to cut down on the host of thieves in the numbers, football and baseball pools and horse-parlor trades, and that the Federal Government could pay off its social security obligations by means of this added revenue. He believes that it would be the most painless form of taxation the American public ever had.

Well, as we said, the response by mail has been remarkable—as letters to sportswriters are measured. We have opened several hundred letters and read as many post cards—while another stack

Buffalo Franchise Due

Pro Teams Scramble For Player Material

Chicago, Jan. 12 (AP).—The most extensive scramble for player material in the history of pro football was under way today as prospects developed at the annual midwinter meeting of the National Football League that at least 11 teams and perhaps 12 will operate in the circuit in 1944.

The pattern included Boston in the Eastern Division along with the New York Giants, Brooklyn Dodgers, Pittsburgh Steelers, Philadelphia Eagles and Washington Redskins.

Club owners and other officials convened tonight to act upon recommendations made by the executive committee regarding franchise applications from Los Angeles, San Francisco and Buffalo, N. Y.

Buffalo, it was speculated, may be granted permission to field a team this season. In that case it would join the reactivated Cleveland Rams, the Chicago Bears, Chicago Cardinals, Detroit Lions and the Green Bay Packers in the Western Division. Thus the league would be balanced with 12 clubs, greatly relieving problems of schedule making which will be taken up along with the draft of college players at the league's spring session in April.

Few Due From Colleges

It is doubtful if the college draft will provide much player material. Out of 300 campus gridders raffled off last June, only 20 saw action in the fall. Most clubs will depend on discharged servicemen to fill out their rosters. Never in league history will competition for player signatures be so keen as in the next three months preceding the April meeting.

Bill Shea, legal adviser to Ted Collins of radio, whose application for a Boston franchise was accepted last June, said "Boston was preparing to go this fall." OOne scout, "Tillie" Manton, former player with the Brooklyn Dodgers, New York Giants and Texas Christian, has been hired by Boston to hunt talent in the Southwest.

Pete Cawthon and Phil Handler, coach of the Brooklyn Dodgers and Chicago Cardinals, respectively, also have been searching throughout the Southwest, while Harry Thayer of Philadelphia and Curley Lambeau of Green Bay have been touring the Pacific Coast.

Boston, Shea said, will appoint two more scouts soon and will choose a coach from a list of four prospects—three college coaches and one former pro mentor—before April.

Buffalo May Field Team

Buffalo's interests are represented by a group of five of the city's businessmen, including Sam Cordovano, line coach for Lou Little at Columbia for 14 years. Promoter Charley Murray also was interested in a franchise for Buffalo.

"We believe if Buffalo gets a franchise we can field a team this season," Cordovano said. "If our application is accepted we could use Municipal Stadium."

Cordovano would be head coach.

Boston already has signed a five-year contract for use of Fenway Park, home of the Boston Red Sox, Shea said.

The Los Angeles group seeking a franchise included Bing Crosby, Frank Mandel, cousin of Fred Mandel, jr., owner of the Detroit Lions; Capt. Graham Smith of the Marines, former general manager of the Lions, and Lieut. A. G. Atwater, brother-in-law of Phil K. Wrigley, owner of the Chicago Cubs. All are Chicagoans but Crosby.

Bertelli Gives Heisman Cup To Notre Dame

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Angelo Bertelli, leader of Notre Dame's football team until called up by the Marines in midseason, today received the Heisman trophy, annually awarded by the Downtown Athletic Club to the outstanding gridiron player of the season.

After being described by his coach, Frank Leahy, as "the greatest 'T' formation quarterback ever to play college football," Bertelli received the trophy from Club President Joseph R. Taylor and then presented it to Notre Dame.

"I was a little sad at leaving an undefeated team," said Bertelli, "but I was glad to join up with another unbeaten outfit."

Referee Loses On Rassle Card

Tiny Bouque, the 400-pound mat referee was the only real loser on the weekly wrestling card last night at Turner's Arena. Bouque took a beating from Maurice LaChappelle in the semifinal when the latter became enraged over losing a decision and pummeled Bouque with both fists until he was pulled away, and in the final the Yellow Mask was disqualified for hitting Bouque and when he climbed out of the ring the Mask ran after the big fellow, tore his shirt from his back and passed it through the crowd for souvenirs.

Promoter Joe Turner witheld the purses of both Don Evans, the winner of the semifinal bout, and LaChappelle. Evans was adjudged the winner after 23 minutes with a body press but LaChappelle claimed he pinned Evans twice before that and when brushed off the usual peaceful matman started clouting Bouque.

Michele Leone was awarded the feature bout as the Yellow Mask was disqualified after 23 minutes for his attack on Bouque, which was continued outside the ring to the delight of the crowd of 1400.

In other matches, Johnny Long defeated Mike DeMetra in 16 minutes with a flying head service; George Macricostas won in 17 minutes over Jack Bishop with a body press and Ed (Strangler) White, the former New York Giant football player, drew with the Black Mask.

J. B. Belk Dies Of Heart Attack; Famed Horseman

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 12.—Returning to his home here this afternoon from his Spring Dale stock farm, James Bogan Belk, 57, widely known horseman and president and owner of the Albemarle Oil & Gas Co., expired from a heart attack while driving along the highway.

Born in Monroe, N. C., son of the late Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Belk, he has resided in Charlottesville for over 30 years. He owned a string of horses which he had raced in recent years on Maryland, New York, Delaware and other Northern tracks. He was one of the founders and first president of the Maryland Horsemen's Protective Association.

Surviving are his wife, the former Marion Jones of Culpeper; two brothers, Thurston Belk, Charlotte, N. C., and Winfree Belk, Cheraw, S. C., and two sisters, Mrs. Gay Ledbetter, Concord, N. C., and Mrs. Grace Delaney, Charlotte.

'Y' Basketball

Two teams were held to two field goals and a third loser scored only four times from the floor in YMCA league games last night on the "Y" courts. The YMCA team defeated Boy Scout Troop 72, 46-8, as the entire squad of 12 players hit the scoring column. Westminster won, 44-10, over Jefferson High of Falls Church, with Sanford's 15 points high while Congress Pages defeated Woodward School, 31-8, with a well-divided attack.

Episcopal Wins, 33-22, Over W.-L.

Forging ahead in the second half, Episcopal High of Alexandria surprised early leading Washington-Lee High yesterday and defeated the usually powerful Generals, 33-22.

Washington-Lee started off like a house afire and led, 8-3, at the end of the first quarter. The Episcopalians began to climb in the second quarter, however, and whittled the Generals' lead down to 12-11. Episcopal took the halftime tip-off for a basket to take the lead and never relinquished it.

Most of the second-half scoring was due to the efforts of Capt. Frank Goodman of Episcopal, who proved a good man indeed, and scored 13 of his 15 points after the half-time marker. Brad Tazewell also got busy toward the end, scoring five of his seven points. There was no outstanding scoring star for Washington-Lee, with five of the Generals scoring four points apiece.

Anacostia Defeats Devitt in Overtime

In a thrilling overtime battle, Anacostia High won from Devitt yesterday, 46-40, on the Anacostia floor. After Devitt held a 16-15 lead at the half, Anacostia went to the fore and appeared to have the game locked, but Terry came through with a long shot to even the count at 40-all at the end of regulation time.

In the extra period, Devitt was held scoreless by Coach Tommy Nolan's defense. Flea Flaherty made the first score of the overtime with a neat shot. Milton Gendason followed with a basket and then dropped in a foul. Don Kline ended the scoring with a free throw.

Fish, Various and Sundry, Described by Former Post Man

By Tom Moore McBride

Jack Bell, former fishing editor of The Post and erstwhile president of the Washington chapter of Izaak Walton League, held the league members spellbound last night as he topped all fishermen's tales with stories of fruit-eating fish, man-eating ants, man-eating fish, ant-eating mammals and fresh water fish that ran up to 1200 pounds.

And strangely enough, all of Bell's stories were true. He's just returned from Brazil.

Last night's meeting of the Walton League was replete with more questions and answers than were asked or answered within memory. And there weren't any picayune questions. All were interesting. Even more so were the answers.

Bell, who went to Brazil with the United States Rubber Development Corp. and who will return there soon, traveled much of the interior which never has been seen by white men. There he saw, and last night described, the great game fish tucunare which hit any plug or moving bait offered, the man-eating piranha, which he said was just as vicious as its reputation, the piracacu, reputedly the largest fresh water fish in the world, but which, he said, is topped by a catfish-like creature called the pirareda, which attains a weight of 1200 pounds.

Jack told of many other things that would be of supreme interest to fishermen, more of which will be told in The Reel Dope in Sunday's Post.

D. C. Fight Promoters Take Cue From Radio Soap Operas

Local fight promoters are dishing out their action in radio serial form these days. Both Turner's Arena and Uline's forces have announced return battles. Next Monday night, Promoter Gabe Menendez will offer the second installment of Charley Bennett and Nick Latsios. On January 21, a week from tomorrow, Promoter Goldie Ahearn will present the third reel of Billy Banks and Victor Creelman.

Bennett beat Latsios when last they met and just what another meeting will decide remains to be seen. Banks downed Creelman last Monday to make the score even between these two. The winner of this third bout, positively (Ahearn speaking) will meet Sammy Angott on February 7.

This rematching could go on forever. With Ahearn making it two out of three, why not make it three out of five and five out of eight, etc.?—HAIGHT.

Treason! Gin Now a Favorite In Kentucky—Colt Pukka Gin

Campbell Assigns Son of Firethorn Top Weight, Ahead of Widener's Platter

By Sid Feder

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—For what the information's worth when you start dipping into the bankroll for your annual winter book contribution, Lieut. Col. Sonny Whitney's Pukka Gin today was tabbed the good thing in the first call over of potential Kentucky Derby candidates.

Early each year, New York Racing Secretary John B. Campbell assigns weights to rate the brand new 3-year-olds for the Experimental Handicap, a 6-furlong dash at Jamaica's spring meeting, and this time he put the long-legged son of Firethorn on top with 126 pounds to 124 for George D. Widener's late-developing Platter.

The Experimental Handicap has little connection with the Derby but is a prep for the Wood Memorial and the Wood is the Eastern test for the Derby.

First Expert Opinion

And as a result, Campbell's Experimental weights, in which he rates last year's 2-year-olds by the way he figures they add up since they've come of age, is regarded annually as the first expert opinion on the Derby.

With Occupy, the gee-gee voted the 2-year-old championship, dropped into third place for the 1944 Experimental, Pukka Gin is being asked to tote top load as a result of his juvenile record of winning one big stake—the 1-mile Champagne at Belmont's fall meet.

Platter spent the early part of his juvenile career doing more eating than winning, but later he got out his running shoes and took the Pimlico Futurity and Walden Stakes, and a number of the boys voted him the young man most likely to succeed when the distances started stretching out toward the Derby's mile and a quarter.

The 1943 2-year-old field being what it was, fillies are given more than just a nod by Campbell. In fact, five of the young ladies are among the top 17 in the ratings, with Brownell Combs' Durazna and Warren Wright's Miss Keeneland sharing the third spot with Occupy at 121 pounds each. The choice of Miss Keeneland came as somewhat of an eyebrow-raiser, since her stablemate, Twilight Team was named queen of the division.

Woolf's Star Outfinished By $7 Shot

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 12 (AP).—Charitable, which carried the G. R. Watkins' silks to victory at Tropical Park, repeated that performance in the featured Grade B Handicap before a crowd of 7348 here this afternoon.

Hard ridden by Porter Roberts, the $7 second choice outfinished Herbert M. Woolf's odds-on choice, Pig Tails, by three-quarters of a length in 1:12 4-5 for the six furlongs. Christopher Ranch's K. Dorko was third, four lengths behind.

Earlier in the afternoon, Legislator, stablemate of Pig Tails, had lasted to win one division of the Grade C Handicap by a nose at 3 to 5. Piccadilly, another favorite, and owned by Mrs. Donald Woodward of Washington, D. C., accounted for the second half of that event, but many a parlay died when Pig Tails failed to make the grade in the headliner.

Pig Tails Heavy Choice

Pig Tails, beaten a nose by Harvard Square in a division of Tropical Park's Inaugural Handicap, went postward today at 85 cents on the dollar.

As might have been expected, Charitable's time was the best made by the handicap winners today.

Charitable and Pig Tails were first out of the stalls. They did not remain in front for long, K. Dorko showed blazing speed as he quickly opened up a length or more on Charitable, while Pig Tails dropped back temporarily. K. Dorko weakened when the stretch run began, leaving the two choices to settle the issue. Charitable finally imposed his will upon Pig Tails in the closing strides.

Roberts Wins Another

Porter Roberts made it two in a row by scoring a two lengths triumph astride Question Man, a $26.40 for two chance in the seventh contest of a mile and a quarter. Never far off the early leaders, question man pounded to the front near the head of the stretch, continuing gamely to the wire. Belfry Chimes beat Fujiwara a half length for second money.

Clip Clop, $24.40, headed Peto Gino for the last purse, with Rocket Gal third.

Gonzaga Choice Over St. John's

The District's outstanding prep school rivalry will be renewed tonight when Coach Johnny Long's St. John's Cadets meet Gonzaga's purple-clad five in Teeh High gym at 8:15.

Coach Joe Kozik's Gonzagans rule the favorite, with a record of seven victories in eight starts, while the Johnnies have lost two of their first three games.

piles up—and so far have found only one negative vote, and that one is tempered.

"As much as I would like to see a tri-yearly lottery in this country, I am afraid the barbarians, outlaws and nontaxpayers would use their super influence against it," writes a Buffalo businessman. Every other letter writer said, in effect, "we're all for it." Soldiers at a nearby fort signed a petition with many names, as did other groups. Even a Canadian voted yes, "if I am eligible to vote at all."

A first class private, in favor of the idea, warns "all of my friends here at camp are for it, but if it is legalized there should be extreme caution against corrupt politicians having a hand in it. This lottery should employ mostly crippled servicemen and should be followed by honorably discharged men from the services, who find it hard obtaining employment. First preference should go to men who served under fire."

Joseph P. O'Brien, winner of the Distinguished Service Cross in the other war, sends along the suggestion that, contrary to somewhat popular belief, all fighter managers are not rascals. He tells a story about Phil Schlossberg.

"Phil served 30 years in the United States Navy, was heavyweight champ of the service and won the Navy Cross for valor during a fight between an Austrian sub and his armed guard on the S. S. W. H. Tilford, a tanker, on June 8, 1918.

"Upon completing his long tour of duty, Schlossberg became manager of a young heavy named Ernie Schaaf. I trained Schaaf and also Arthur Dekuh, for Phil.

"Everything went fine until a lot of pressure was brought upon Phil and he sold Schaaf's contract to another manager for $10,000. Phil made quite a speech to Ernie when they parted company. He reminded him that he loved him like a son and warned him to watch his step. 'A lot of things can happen to you, if you go on to the big dough,' Phil told him. 'Why, you might even get killed in the ring . . .'"

"Phil took out a $10,000 insurance policy on Ernie the day they were separated. As you know, poor Ernie was killed in his fight with Primo Carnera. But here's something you might not know: Phil collected the $10,000. It was all his, and he could have used it at that time. But he immediately boarded a train for Boston and handed the check for $10,000 to Schaaf's mother."

There's a curtain call to this story. The day after Pearl Harbor Schlossberg, the old salt, re-enlisted in the Navy. He holds the rating of chief bos'n's mate, and is doing a fine job training in an important "boot' school.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

A. F. WHITNEY, railroad brotherhood leader who stuck out his neck and was the first to accept presidential arbitration of the railway wage dispute, has been getting it hot and heavy from the three brotherhoods which refused to arbitrate. But he came back at them the other day with a poem which reads:

Three blind mice—hear how they talk!
They all refuse to arbitrate—
They're gambling with their country's fate—
Though the hour is getting late
For the three blind mice.

This rhyme was sent by Railroad Trainman Whitney to all the secretaries, vice presidents, and subordinate lodges of his union with a confidential letter blasting the three hold-out brotherhoods. In the letter Whitney revealed that 450,000 copies of Labor, the railroad brotherhood magazine, had been sent to the postoffice just before the President offered arbitration.

"Thousands of these copies were recalled and destroyed," Whitney wrote to his fellow-trainmen. "On the following day they were reprinted without changing the cross on a 't' or the dot of an 'i.' This hasty action, of course did not help the paper shortage, and in all probability will never be explained."

Note—Whitney didn't mention it, but between 8000 and 10,000 copies of Labor were burned in a furnace in the Labor Building just across from the Capitol building.

Whitney then went on to excoriate the three "nonarbitrating brotherhoods" whom Labor magazine had called "The Three Musketeers."

"Were they afraid to trust the President?" he asked. "Had they overlooked the fact that the Commander in Chief could settle the dispute without their consent? Or is it possible that they were playing organization politics in the hope that they may strengthen their numerical and financial condition?

"Our experience is that organizations of labor must have something to offer to attract men to their ranks, and it would appear that these unions had utterly failed, since their memberships have been on the wane during the past 15 years."

Whitney put it right on the line in one of the most forthright letters of American labor history. This, and the name-calling of the three nonarbitrating brotherhoods, probably means just as serious a split among railroad labor as that between the AFL and CIO.

High-Cost Aluminum

OF ALL THE LOBBIES operating in Washington, most effective are those which operate from right inside the Cabinet or the Democratic national committee.

The Aluminum Corporation of America seems to be benefiting from such a lobby now. For several years it has received kindly treatment for Uncle Jesse Jones. Also it has had its chief Washington counsel, able Oscar Ewing, sitting on the Democratic national committee as vice chairman.

Anyway, just last week Alcoa received another nice favor.

Last summer this column exposed the fact that Jesse Jones had given a secret contract to Alcoa to build an aluminum plant at Shipshaw, in Canada, which would not cost Alcoa a cent, but would be paid for out of aluminum purchases by the U. S. Government.

This column predicted that after building this giant plant in Canada, Alcoa would close down American plants, throwing U. S. workmen out of employment, but would continue operating in Canada.

Last week that was exactly what happened.

Four aluminum pot lines were closed down in Burlington, N. J., and Queens, N. Y., with 20 more to be closed down soon. U. S. plants sell the Government aluminum at 15 cents a pound, while we have been paying 21 cents for Alcoa's Canadian aluminum from Shipshaw. This still continues.

Inside fact is that we are now overproduced on aluminum by about 600 million pounds per year. Shipshaw's shipment to the United States in 1944 is scheduled at just about this amount—560 million pounds. Yet it is continuing—despite its higher price.

Officially the reason for continuing Shipshaw aluminum is that the factory uses electricity, while Eastern U. S. aluminum plants burn coal. However, there may be a much more potent reason.

Jesse Jones loaned Canadian Alcoa 68 million dollars and signed an unusual contract whereby Alcoa was not obligated to pay the balance when the United States stopped buying aluminum. If we stopped buying aluminum today, the unpaid balance would be 34 million dollars.

So some officials suspect that Jesse doesn't want his books to show a loss of 34 million dollars on a deal for which he was widely criticized.

Belatedly, Yes, But Here They Are!

An Exhumed List of the 'Ten Best;' Notes and Gossip of the Theater

'WAY BACK LAST YEAR, before all of our energy and our wits—if any— went up the flu, we had dreamed up a list of the "Ten Best Pictures of the Year" for entry in the Film Daily's annual poll of the motion picture editors, critics, commentators and whatnots. The termites set in before that list ever got into print or the mails.

GREER GARSON

As I was saying, that list was intended for the Film Daily's yearly guessing game and so was restricted to the feature films released between the dates of November 1, 1942, and October 31, 1943.

Since the results of the poll, so far as I know, have not as yet been made known, there can be no harm in taking a shot at it from the sidelines, just for the fun of the thing, even if the votes won't count beyond the indulgence of a personal whim.

For my fatuous favor, the 10 best pictures of 1943, within the above limitations, were:

1. RANDOM HARVEST
2. WATCH ON THE RHINE
3. THE HUMAN COMEDY
4. YANKEE DOODLE DANDY
5. THE MORE THE MERRIER
6. STAGE DOOR CANTEEN
7. THIS IS THE ARMY
8. FOR WHOM THE BELL TOLLS
9. AIR FORCE
10. CASABLANCA

If those release dates could be stretched a bit, and made to include English productions made as long as two years ago, but only recently exhibited in this country, two of my nominations would have to give way to "Madame Curie," immediately impending on the screen at Loew's Palace, and "Jeannie," that modest and incomparably fine British item that now holds all of the records—length of run, total attendance and receipts—at the Little Theater, with the end not yet anywhere in sight.

It seems to me that the young man most likely to succeed as the outstanding director in 1943 is Mervyn LeRoy, with both "Random Harvest" and "Madame Curie" to his credit. There is about each that indefinable quality of superlative excellence that represents a rare composite of all the elements of which superior drama is made. It is perhaps something more than coincidence that Greer Garson's distinguished talents were a contributory factor to the deep appeal of both pictures—as costar with Ronald Colman in the first; with Walter Pidgeon in the second. But, after all, it is presumable that Mr. LeRoy has something to say about the selection of his casts.

In passing, it is a pleasure to note that Miss Garson and Mr Pidgeon, as Red Book Award winners of 1942, recently passed their honors along to Bette Davis and Paul Lukas—for "Watch on the "Rhine"—for 1943, and that Mr. Pidgeon also was accoladed by Look Magazine, along with Betty Hutton and Jennifer Jones, as one of the screen's most eminent actors. And who remembers when he was just another baritone in musical comedy and operetta?

The Line of March

Still a little hazy on the whole thing myself, if you would care to trust my febrile fancy, it would appear that "Flesh and Fantasy" will be opening on the screen at RKO-Keith's this morning, at about the time "Cry Havoc" is breaking out at Loew's Capitol, and that tomorrow "Madame Curie" will be taking over at the Palace, with down-the-block opposition from Rosalind Russell and Brian Aherne in "What a Woman," at the Earle.

A little farther stretch down F Street, at the Metropolitan, tomorrow will accord Monogram's "Women in Bondage" its Washington's first run. If it had not sounded a split-tone too much like "Hitler's Children," I suppose this one would have been called the sad and sadistic saga of "Hitler's Women"—in the national, not the personal, sense. The two principal victims of Nazi persecution on the screen are Gail Patrick and Nancy Kelly, with Alan Baxter as one of their chief tormentors. It is grapevined to this desk that the picture definitely is something to be seen.

So that's what will be keeping the cricks—and probably you, too—fairly well occupied this weekend. Hope you like 'em.

More or less in harmony with the tenor of this column, is the announcement that "Lassie Come Home" was voted the Boxoffice Blue Ribbon Award as the best all-family release for December, and that during the same month the box-office winners in the War Department Theaters were "Destination Tokyo," "The North Star," "His Butler's Sister," "Government Girl" and "Lost Angel."

Notes and Anecdotes of Broadway

New York, Jan. 12.—Noel Coward, who is a good-will ambassador wherever he goes, left America minus one friend before he went off to South Africa. The loss occurred at a party given for him by Clifton Webb, at Neysa McMein's apartment . . . At this party Grace Moore agreed to sing one song "provided that it's one of Noel's songs, and Noel accompanies me." They selected "I'll See You Again." Coward seated himself at the piano and played it, but in his own key. Miss Moore, whose voice-range naturally is different, tried to warble it an octave higher, sat down—and the feud with Coward is on.

GRACE MOORE

Howard Hughes, one of Hollywood's wealthiest citizens, entered a complaint with the OPA office on the West Coast about the termination of the rental of the house in which he has been living . . . Judge Jeremiah T. Mahoney is threatening a $200,000 libel suit because of a published report that he had exchanged blows with a Tammany Hall leader. "I'll sue for $100,000, plus special damages of $100,000," Mahoney told the lawyers. When they asked: "What's the special damages for?" he explained: "For linking me with a pushover."

Jimmy Allen, assistant director of OWI, left his Q St. apartment in Washington and hailed a cab. He saw an Army officer waiting and invited him to share the ride. "I'm going to the Social Security Building," said the officer—Capt. Monroe Greenthal, formerly of United Artists. "That's where I work, too," said Allen . . . "You live in this house on Q st.?" Allen asked. The captain nodded, and they discovered that since the summer of 1942 they had been living next door to each other. And just before the cab ride ended, they also discovered that their respective families live in the same house on Central Park West, in New York.

Harry Green, the screen and stage actor, earned a fortune publishing books in England, before the war. Green once had a thousand $1000 bills in a safe-deposit box. He would entertain his friends by asking: "Want to see what a million dollars looks like?" and then take them to his vault . . . Irvin Cobb's friends were reminiscing about the humorist—and one of them told of the time Cobb rode a mule up a mountain in Mexico. "That was a silver saddle you rode on," said the guide. Cobb replied: "If you hadn't told me, I'd have been willing to bet you it was a chafing dish."

Preparations now are being made for a large number of film and stage stars to visit the White House for the President's birthday celebration. The first Broadway notables entertained overnight at the White House were Katharine Cornell and her husband, Guthrie McClintic . . . White House servants met them at the station. When one of them took McClintic's bag it suddenly opened and his shirts, suit, pajamas, etc., fell out . . . Then, at the White House, McClintic discovered that he had lost a collar-button. He borrowed one from the President. Before dinner, Miss Cornell rested, under the sheets, while her husband took a shower and wrapped a towel around himself. There was a knock on the door. "Come in," Miss Cornell said . . . The door opened. "It's quite all right. Stay just as you are. It's only I," said Mrs. Roosevelt.

Mrs. Maxim Litvinoff returned to Russia a few days ago, traveling by air via Alaska. During her two-year stay here she was the most colorful member of the diplomatic circle . . . When, in Washington's public library, she saw Eugene Lyons' anti-Soviet books displayed prominently, she convinced the librarian that Albert Rhys Williams' "The Russians" should be given equal prominence . . . Charges of 'Politics' Fly At Soldier Vote Hearing

By the Associated Press

Nettled Republicans on the House Elections Committee threw back a charge of "politics" yesterday in reply to a Democratic accusation that they are "just shadow boxing" with the issue of servicemen's votes. The committee is trying to frame a bill on the subject.

The shadow-boxing barb was thrown by House Democratic Leader McCormack at a press conference, after he had noted that the Republican National Committee in Chicago had adopted a resolution indorsing the proposal to enable service people to vote.

"Republican members of Congress and many Democrats not controlled by the Administration," said Representative Vursell (Republican) of Illinois, member of the Elections Committee, "are making the only real effort to get an election bill that will get the complete ballot to all our soldiers overseas and in the continental United States.

"What politics that have entered into consideration of this legislation have been brought in by Democratic leaders following the will of the palace guard downtown," he added.

President's Plea Ignored

Ignoring the President's plea for a bill that would provide for a single Federal ballot, the House committee struggled with a bill providing for balloting not only for the President and members of Congress but even for precinct constable, under State regulations.

Chairman Worley (Democrat) of Texas said the committee expected to have a bill out on the floor by next week, with the machinery for handling the ballots to be left to the States.

In the meantime, the House World War Veterans Committee heard Omar B. Ketchum, legislative representative of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, suggest that a bonus bill be drawn up now for soldiers in this war.

"Ketchum Gives VFW Views

Ketchum said the VFW was not greatly in favor of the bill brought out by the House Military Committee for mustering-out pay, with a maximum of $300, in contrast with the Senate-approved version which called for amounts varying between $200 and $500.

A $100 mustering-out sum was recommended by Ketchum for men who served in continental United States and double that amount for overseas service.

The bonus he suggested was $1 a day for home service and $1.50 a day for overseas duty, with a low of $200 and high of $800 for United States duty and $400 to $1200 for foreign service.

2 Sailors Convicted Of Mississippi Murder

Waynesboro, Miss., Jan. 12 (AP). Two sailors, Maurice Shimniok, of Madison, Wis., and Joseph Leemons of Maylene, Ala., were convicted of murder here today in the slaying of Thomas S. Boykin, former Wayne County sheriff.

Judge Jesse Graham immediately sentenced the two 18-year-old defendants to die in the electric chair February 28. A defense attorney announced the case would be appealed.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

OPA Ration Division Facing Reorganization

A reorganization of OPA's price and rationing divisions will be announced soon. The administrative work in each division will be centralized, among other changes

The reorganization is being worked out by Glenn Mowatt. . . . FEA Administrator Leo T. Crowley is the latest victim of the flu. Meantime, his staff is working out a new lend-lease agreement with the British which would compel them to pay cash for heavy postwar goods. . . . When Roy F. Hendrickson becomes deputy director of United States Relief and Rehabilitation he's expected to take with him three of his top staff members at War Foods. They are: Dick Gaumintz, an assistant; Fred McMillen, personnel director, and Jim Hoofnagle, budget director.

Civil Service Commission has asked Congress for the authority to pay transportation costs to Washington of new employes recruited in the field. War and Navy departments now pay these costs and it puts other agencies at a distinct disadvantage . . . War Manpower Boss Paul McNutt is holding up meritorious promotions of high-salaried employes until increases are proposed for employes in the low brackets . . . United Federal Workers is set to dynamite the Hatch (anti-politics) Act. It'll soon file suit in the name of half a dozen employes and the union to enjoin the Civil Service Commission from using funds to enforce the law, which forbids Federal workers to participate actively in politics.

RED TAPE: At a recent discussion on how red tape can be eliminated from personnel work these views were expressed: Jim Hard, Budget Bureau: "We need a manual to end all manuals." . . . Representative Ramspeck: "We need less talk and study and more concrete results. It takes up to 100 different steps to get a person on the Federal payroll. Why can't this be cut to 50, or even 25?" . . . Guy Moffett of the White House staff: "We need to use simple and understandable language in dealing with personnel problems. Much of the red tape is brought about by confusion and misunderstanding." . . . Dick Carlson, personnel director of Federal Communications, in opening the discussion, cited a definition of red tape by Charles E. Weber of his staff:

"A peculiar Government complication,
Which breaks all laws of conversation;
Causes untold business consternation,
I results in business indignation."

An article in this week's Saturday Evening Post, "Snooping on the Potomac," takes the hide off stupid Government investigators. The piece, writteen by Henry F. Pringle, formerly with the Office of War Information, is recommended reading for members of the Dies Committee who'll soon launch an investigation of methods used by the Civil Service Commission in its loyalty probes of Federal workers. The article concludes that the young men of FBI, Civil Service, Army's G-2, and Naval Intelligence, and the rest, "have failed, on many occasions, to conduct their character investigations with even a flavoring of common-sense."

Pringle told of one occasion when he was questioned about a writer he had recommended to the old Office of Facts and Figures. He denied to the investigator that the applicant drank to excess, associated with doubtful women, was extravagant or had radical leanings. Finally the investigator demanded: "Can't you think of anything bad to say about him?" Another of Pringle's friends had a commission in the armed service held up because of an article he had written which an officer said was entitled: "Only the Crows Are Contented." The officer read into the title the implication that this country was so forlorn that only a crow could be happy here, and that, he said, wasn't patriotic. It happened that the correct title was "Only the Cows Are Contented," a dull, economic article which had described the milk problem in New York.

Pringle tells of another story where a Harvard-bred Southerner was suspected of consorting with Negro women because pictures of Negro women had been found in his room. It seems that the suspect was an anthropologist and until the war he had studied native types in the South Pacific Islands. But the climax of all, Pringle says, was achieved by another Civil Service detective "who fixed his witness with the firm, cold eye of a man before whom criminals quake. 'Has Mr. Blank ever advocated the overthrow of the Government by violence?' he demanded. There was an emphatic negative. 'Has he ever advocated overthrow by legislative means?' asked the Civil Service man." All this, Pringle says, would be funny were not the reputations of sincere and patriotic workers at stake. That's true enough and if the Dies Committee wants to make an objective investigation, and not red-bait, it can find plenty of material.

Firemen Rescue Three Women in Blaze

HARVARD ST. FIRE—Three women, one overcome by smoke, were carried down ladders by firemen in a blaze in a three-story rooming house at 1334 Harvard st. nw. last night. Mrs. Lucille Reynolds, felled by smoke, was removed to Garfield Hospital. Shown (left to right) are Battalion Chief J. W. Allan, Miss Dorothy May Norrie, her sister, Miss Helen Ruth Norrie, and Lieut. A. L. Weber. Dorothy was taken to safety by Weber and Helen by Pvt. E. W. Howard, not shown in picture. Edward N. Wells, owner of the house, an invalid, was assisted out the back door as flames from the burning basement cut off escape on the first floor. Quick action by the firemen prevented spread of flames to the second and third floors

Wholesaler Says Thefts Slashed Taxes

Alexander Forman, head of the liquor wholesaling firm of Forman Inc., testified that between 1938 and 1941 his company paid taxes of only $100 to $1100 on gross sales of from $800,000 to $1,200,000 a year, because profits were reduced by embezzlements of his former bookkeeper, Albert M. Steinberg, 43.

"We couldn't make much profit because of the shortages," Forman said in referring to the $93,000 missing from the firm.

Steinberg is charged with embezzling $9300 of this money.

Today about 40 local liquor dealers are scheduled to testify as Government witnesses to support the Government's contention that cash payments by retailers to the firm were noted as charge account sales by Steinberg.

Forman denied contentions of the defense that he was "a master of intrigue" and Steinberg "a stooge" in a plot to embezzle the $93,000 to avoid income taxes.

When Forman finished testifying yesterday, his sons, Morris, an Army private, and Isadore, an officer in the firm, testified that Steinberg handled financial records of the firm in such a way that it would have been easy for him to pocket the money.

The trial by jury is now in its fifth day before Justice Matthew F. McGuire. The prosecutors are Assistant U. S. Attorneys Bernard Margolius and John L. Ingoldsby. Defense attorney is Austin Canfield.

Tax Ruling Expected

The ABC Board is expected to issue a precedent-making ruling today on a complaint of violating a Federal statute other than the ABC Act itself. This is the first case involving such a charge the board has heard, according to Chairman Thomas E. Lodge.

The licensee, Bernard Bobb, liquor dealer at 123 G st. nw., appeared before the board yesterday. On advice of counsel, he refused to testify, but his counsel admitted he sold more than 5 gallons of liquor without a Federal retail stamp.

Francis J. Sweeney, Alcohol Tax Unit investigator, testified Bobb's Federal wholesale stamp was not bought until the day after the incident which brought about ABC citation.

The Federal stamp charge was allowed under Section 17 of the ABC Act which permits the board to proceed against a licensee who allows use of his premises for an "unlawful purpose."

Walsh Replaces Overton As District Committeeman

Senator Overton (Democrat) of Louisiana resigned yesterday as a member of the Senate District Committee and was immediately replaced by Senator Arthur Walsh (Democrat) of New Jersey.

A member of the committe for nearly 10 years, Senator Overton devoted considerable time to District legislation and was long active in championing a proposed formula for fiscal relations between the Federal and District governments based on the vast tax-exempt holdings here of the United States as a substitute for the present six-million-dollar annual lump sum contribution.

His successor is the newest addition to the Senate, having been appointed December 2 to fill a vacancy resulting from the death of Senator Barbour (Republican.)

Senator Overton said he was forced to resign because the pressure of work on other committees did not leave him time properly to concern himself with District affairs. He declared, however, he would continue his interest in District problems and would not relinquish his post on the Appropriations Subcommittee which takes over the District supply bill when the House finishes with it.

Senator Walsh, 48-year-old native of Newark, N. J., came to the Senate with a background of experience with the Federal Housing Administration and the New Jersey Workmen's Compensation Investigating Commission. The latest issue of the Congressional Directory says he began his career as a recording violinist for Thomas A. Edison in 1915 and is vice president and director of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., a position which he dropped on a leave of absence basis upon his appointment to the Senate.

Senator Walsh said he wanted time to study the District's legislative calendar before commenting on his new committee assignment. He indicated the home rule bill of Chairman McCarran of the District Committee providing an elective counsel-city manager form of government for the District would draw his first attention.

Army, OCD Limit Blackouts To Sundays, Every 3 Months

Air raid sirens announcing blackout and practice alerts will sound in Washington only on Sundays, and then not more than once every three months, the War Department and the Office of Civilian Defense ordered last night.

The public drills were eliminated throughout the Nation, except in coastal areas, where alerts and blackouts will be hereafter authorized "not oftener than once in three months and then only on Sunday," the joint announcement said.

The Capital is considered in the East Coast area.

The curtailment, the military and civilian agencies said, is intended to decrease interference with war production and has become possible because communities are sufficiently well organized to cope with "such emergencies as can now reasonably be anticipated."

The War Department, however, cautioned that the action should not be interpreted to mean that war is over as far as the continental United States is concerned and ordered its field agencies to be prepared to reactivate air raid drills.

Civilian defense personnel and the public, it was said, must also be ready to engage in more active training in the event the "strategical situation changes in such a manner as to warrant increased passive defense measures."

Elimination of the air-raid drills, the War Department stated, means an even greater burden is placed on civilians to "be alert" and to utilize manpower more efficiently to assure fighting forces of being adequately supplied.

The OCD said it will recommend continuance of periodic training for local civilian defense units and, with the War Department, said the need still exists for volunteers to serve with control centers, air-raid wardens, auxiliary police, medical and fire services and to assist in keeping down losses in war material through fires, accidents and other causes.

John Martin, acting OCD director, said the move "indicates the necessity for practice incident drills," exercises which do not include public participation.

Vatican Service Has Handled 345,398 Prisoner Messages

Archbishop Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States, said yesterday that the Vatican information service in Washington has handled 345,398 messages for prisoners of war and civilians in belligerent countries during its first year of operation.

The Vatican service takes messages of 25 words from Axis prisoners of war here or families of American prisoners in Axis hands and delivers them through officials of the Holy See.

Archbishop Cicognani said some messages have been delivered to Americans in Japan and the Philippines, but these are extremely difficult to get through because of interference by the Japanese government. Some trouble has been encountered in getting messages to Germany as well, he said.

All messages coming or going through the United States are submitted to American censorship, and copies are kept at the Apostolic Delegation, Cardinal Cicognani told a press conference.

The Apostolic Delegation in Washington also serves Canada, Australia and some South American countries.

Six seminarians from Holy Cross College spend 8 hours of week with the technical aspects of the service. Pope Benedict XV carried on the service during the last World War, the cardinal said, and the present Pope Pius XII, was anxious that the Vatican continue the work during this war.

Library's Services

A leaflet entitled "Your Library" and which describes the services of the Washington Public Library has been published, and is available to the public, according to an announcement made yesterday by Miss Clara W. Herbert, chief librarian.

D. C. Ends Sale Of Delinquent Tax Properties

The District's annual sale of tax certificates on tax delinquent properties was concluded yesterday afternoon when an hour's extension of time was granted to clean up the final sales. About 5500 sales were made.

Although final figures were not available last night, Collector of Taxes Guy Pearson said it was thought individual buyers bought a larger proportion of certificates than usual by reason of numerous purchases by one buyer of small unimproved suburban lots. Certificates not sold are automatically bought in by the District.

Largest property on which a certificate was sold was the Shapiro, Inc., tract at 1341 Connecticut ave., sold for $8072.11. The property has a $200,000 building on it. Also sold were certificates on several parcels of land constituting the Marjorie Webster School of Expression and Physical Education, 7775 17th st. nw., amounting to more than $5500.

Certificates entitle buyers to 1 per cent interest on the amount of the 1943 taxes for a two-year, interval, after which buyers may apply for a deed, making it necessary for the owner to deal with the deed holder in regaining full right to his property.

Plan Offered By NCHA to Clear Slums

Citing its policy of slum reclamation "without ultimate cost to the consumer," the National Capital Housing Authority, in an annual report released yesterday, made a bid for a 20-year postwar program to rebuild an estimated 20,000 substandard dwellings here.

Submitted to President Roosevelt on December 24, and forwarded by him to Congress, the report asserted the 20,000 figure was actually an understatement.

It was arrived at in a 1940 survey. But since that time makeshift remodeling, "wartime neglect" and overcrowding have reduced many more houses to the same deplorable state, the report declared.

Rehousing a Necessity

But whether the forthcoming task will be larger or smaller for NCHA depends upon the performance of private builders. There is a large area for development by them if speculative building is not the immediate objective, it was stated.

Low-income families, particularly Negroes, must be rehoused in permanent structures, and to that end the report urged an immediate increase in allocations of dwellings for Negroes.

Current attacks on public housing are based on fears it depreciates neighboring values and makes home financing and refinancing more difficult, it was said.

"The fact is," the report declared, "that permanent NCHA properties stabilize values, make investment more secure. Admittedly," it added, "they do not promote speculative prices."

While building in the past few years has resulted in an adequate supply of homes for most white families, the present situation does not even care for incoming Negro war workers—under the National Housing Agency's regulations among the first to be housed in war centers.

"Orderly Transition"

Since 1940, it was stated, NCHA has proved its worth in furthering the war effort by providing dwellings for war workers neglected by private construction.

To plan ahead now for a permanent housing program will help effect an "orderly transition to a peace economy." Within one year after the present emergency, the report said, NCHA plans to remove the temporary homes wartime restrictions of materials has forced it to build since 1940.

And it can point to its contribution in improving the areas surrounding the sites of projects recently put up.

So far as the postwar reclamation program is concerned, it was said, the areas attacked will be those recently shown by the Council for Social Agencies to have the highest incidence of disease, delinquency and crime.

Congress was invited, as it was once before, to make a thorough study of NCHA's program and policies.

Child Care Aid To Be Asked Of Chest Again

With assurance by the War Manpower Commission yesterday that increasing employment of mothers here demands continuation of its foster-home and counselling program, the Child Care and Protection Committee of Civilian War Services took these steps to secure funds for the coming year:

An appeal will be sent to the Community War Fund, which last week denied a $29,000 appropriation request to support the program until money can be secured federally or locally.

Federal Works Agency, disburser of the Lanham Act funds, which pay for the nursery school program for children between the ages of 2 and 5, will be asked to broaden its appropriation to cover these services to mothers and their children under 2 years of age.

The House Education Committee will be called on for immediate action on the Thomas bill, Nation-wide child care measure which has been pigeonholed since last July after it passed the Senate.

The Child-Care Committee, meeting in an emergency session at the U. S. Information Center yesterday afternoon, will be called together again on Friday, January 21, to review results of this action.

It was hoped yesterday, as Miss Dorothy Pearse, director of the foster day care and counselling service and of the nursery school program, told the meeting present funds would come to an end February 14, that money from one of the three sources will be forthcoming in time to save the program.

One other step, taken at the suggestion of the Community War Fund, will be to ask the Council of Social Agencies whether existing family and child welfare organizations here can handle the service's case load in addition to their other functions.

The nursery school setup still awaits assumption by the Board of Education of administrative functions. Recommended by the District Commissioners, decision on the step is expected next Wednesday.

Life-Saving Plasma Speeded to Ailing Boy

WINGS OF MERCY—The Nation's Capital leads the country in life-saving action for 4-year-old Billy Meers in Dallas, Tex. The first shipment of plasma to Billy's sickbed is air-mailed by The Washington Post. Bernice Sieferman of Nashville, Tenn., an American Airlines stewardess, accepts the air express package from E. C. Miehle, AA cargo traffic supervisor.

City News in Brief

Found Guilty of Theft

James L. Rogers, 18, Negro, was found guilty in Municipal Court of stealing 5 pounds of butter and 60 pounds of ham and pork from a galley in the Ships Service Building of the Navy Yard. Rogers, said by police to be a civilian employe who lives at 1612 10th st. nw., was alleged to have taken the food to a car owned by a sailor who unknowingly drove it out of the Navy Yard.

Judge Thomas D. Quinn referred Rogers' case to the probation office.

Five Fined in Short Weight

Five grocers were fined from $25 to $175 apiece yesterday in Municipal Court on charges of short-weighing consumers.

The action appeared to be the beginning of a drive by the Department of Weights and Measures to protect Washington's buying public.

Those fined were Bernard Schulman, 1544 9th st. nw., $150 for short weight on pork chops, cabbage and chickens; Jack Smotrich, 901 L st. nw., $175 on similar charges; Jack Stein, 932 M st. nw., $25 on cabbage sales; Jacob Lipkin, 1251 4th st. nw., $125 on pork chops, cabbage and chicken sales, Louis Perlman, 1363 28th st. nw., $50 on pork chop and cabbage sales.

Prisoner Found Insane

Howard R. Phillips, 38, Negro, under indictment on the charge of first-degree murder, was adjudged insane yesterday by a District Court jury. The hearing was held while Phillips was bound and weighted to his chair. He was accused of shooting his common-law wife.

The attorneys were Samuel Barker and Arthur Catins.

Hotel Pipeline Approved

The Senate interrupted debate yesterday on the two-billion-dollar national tax program to pass a House-approved bill authorizing the District Commissioners to grant permission to the Mayflower Hotel Corp. to construct a pipe line across De Sales st. nw. to carry steam for heating purposes to a proposed annex to the hotel on the north side of De Sales st. between Connecticut ave. and 17th st.

The bill, which passed the House on November 30, now goes to the President for his signature. It was called up in the Senate by Majority Leader Barkley in the absence of Chairman McCarran of the District Committee and was approved without discussion.

Too Much at Stake

Three little Negro boys tried to purloin a sirloin from the windowsill of the District Attorney's office yesterday—but all they got was a box of chocolates.

The clerk of the office, Bettie Purdy, placed the steak and the candy on the sill of a first-floor window in Municipal Court. Casting an occasional eye in their direction, she suddenly saw the boys running away with her treasures. She screamed loudly, the young 'uns dropped the steak and disappeared with the chocolates.

Miss Purdy put the steak under lock and key with next week's indictments.

Mailing Cards Banned

An order to "cease and desist" from alleged misrepresentation in the sale of printed mailing cards, designed for use in obtaining information concerning delinquent debtors, was issued yesterday by the Federal Trade Commission against William E. Spicer, former chairman of Draft Board No. 5.

The order was the second of a similar nature to be issued against Spicer since last October.

Yesterday's order charged that Spicer and two West Coast men sold cards to collection agencies on which were printed the words "Chief Statistician" with Spicer's Washington address and "other statements which the commission finds falsely represent to the recipients that the request for information contained on the cards comes from some Government agency."

Robbery Reported

James G. Hurst, 31, of 510 9th st. nw., an employe of the Southern Grille, was assaulted and robbed of $22 early yesterday while walking in the 900 block of New York ave. nw. Treated in Emergency Hospital for head lacerations and contusions, Hurst told police that a white man, bare-headed and clad in a gray tweed suit, no topcoat, was responsible.

2 Burned in Gas Blast

Mrs. Melba Wuearski, 20, of 1521 Oates st. ne., and James Gunter, 27, of 1519 Oates st. ne., received first degree head burns when the gas burner exploded in the basement of Mrs. Wuearski's home.

When the gas burner went out, the couple lit matches to investigate and the burner was ignited. They were treated at Casualty Hospital and released.

Fireman Injured

Pvt. Lawrence Carter, Negro, 26, of 805 19th st. ne., suffered injuries to his right leg yesterday when he fell off a No. 4 Engine Co. truck responding to a fire. He was admitted to Freedmen's Hospital.

War Fraud Actions

Tom C. Clark, Assistant Attorney General, told 150 members of the Federal Bar Association yesterday that the Department of Justice is conducting 137 new investigations of war frauds every month.

Clark spoke at the weekly luncheon of the association stating that "paytrioteers" have existed here in every war, although it has been found that less than 1 per cent of the present total war procurement involved fraud.

He said 3000 complaints a month reach the Department of Justice, and in the last 80 days there had been an increase of 181 per cent in war fraud complaints. Clark said the attorneys of the Department of Justice had obtained convictions in 92 per cent of trials.

Sewing Machines Stolen

Four sewing machines, although practically nonexistent hereabouts, were found by theieves in Kann's Department Store warehouse, Delaware ave. and st. sw., about January 6, officials reported to police yesterday. The stolen articles, worth $350, were listed as two Westinghouse and two Stratford machines.

$4000 Earring Lost

It was only an earring that Beatrice Cartwright of New York City lost Monday between the Carlton Hotel and Union Station, but she told police yesterday the pendant contained three diamonds and a pearl, valued at $4000.

Embezzlement Charged

George Morris Oakes, 31, of 6508 Piney Branch rd. nw., was free on $1000 bond yesterday after he was arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage and charged with embezzlement of $3423 from a Giant Food Store, at 6514 Georgia ave. nw., of which he was manager.

Detectives of the check and fraud squad, who arrested Oakes at his home Tuesday, said that the sum had been embezzled from March to November, 1943. They alleged the money had been used to pay gambling debts.

Fined for Speeding

John W. Johnson, Interstate Commerce commissioner, was fined $15 yesterday in Traffic Court for speeding January 7 in Rock Creek Parkway. Johnson, who resides at the Shoreham Hotel, was said by police to have exceeded a 35-mile-per-hour limit.

Blood plasma to sustain the life of 4-year-old Billy Meers in Texas was sped by plane last night from the Nation's Capital to the boy's sickbed in a Dallas hospital.

Made possible by the initial donations of 14 donors, 4 pints of plasma were processed at the blood donor clinic of Gallinger Hospital yesterday to be shipped by air express.

Two donations are necessary to produce 1 pint of plasma and the next shipment of the substance that means life to ailing Billy will be made by The Washington Post tomorrow.

Answering appeals by sympathetic Washingtonians, The Post suggested a plan to Gallinger whereby the hospital releases as much plasma from its blood bank as is being replaced by donations intended for the boy.

Gallinger's blood clinic is volunteering for the job, while the air express shipment was made possible through American Airlines.

The plight of Billy Meers was disclosed Sunday when it was learned that Baylor Hospital had to cease giving the boy transfusions which have kept him alive for months because the hospital's blood bank was running dry.

Billy, who is suffering from chronic nephritis—an incurable kidney ailment—can only be kept alive by regular transfusions of as much as 2 pints a day.

The hospital, it was reported, will not continue transfusions unless and until it receives at least 100 pints from donors. Billy's physicians declared that the boy will be able to live for a week or so without plasma.

Among the 14 donors at Gallinger was a group of eight members of the National Association of Government Employes, including Misses Ivy Innes and Ruth Ginn of the British Supply Mission, and D. E. Hippensteel, James B. Klerekoper, Robert H. Ryan, Douglas L. Roderick, John M. Hamilton, and John W. Tyler, all of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

District Flier Becomes Ace During Raid

Lieut. Michael J. Quirk, 23, whose home is at 3718 Livingston st. nw., won the status of flying "ace" on his first anniversary overseas, when he shot down his fifth German plane during Tuesday's spectacular Allied raid on Nazi production centers.

QUIRK

A member of the "long-distance fighters" squadron led by Maj. James R. Howard, the young pilot, who won his wings in July, 1942, was one of the group which downed 14 of the more than 100 enemy ships destroyed.

Last heard from less than a month ago by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Timothy J. Quirk, the flier had told how he had accounted for his third enemy craft and was looking forward to more. His father is assayer of the Bureau of the Mint.

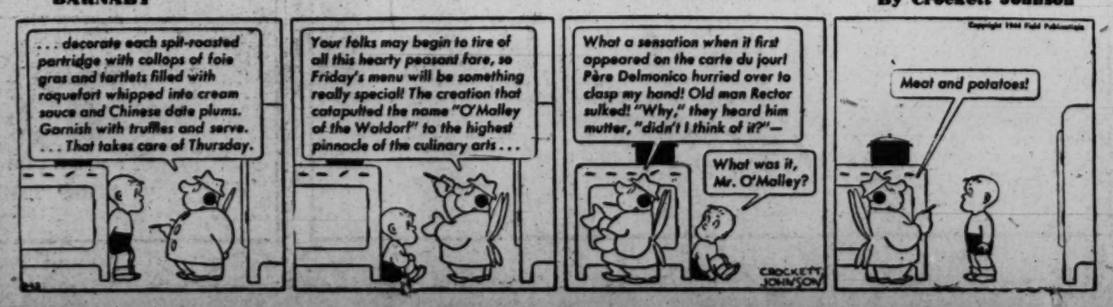
In addition to his newly won "ace" standing, Lieutenant Quirk holds the Distinguished Flying Cross for 40 fighter combat missions over enemy territory, and an Air Medal with three Oak Leaf Clusters. A graduate of St. John's College of this city, he studied for three years at Catholic University before enlisting in the Army Air Force.

Hankin Attacks Capital Transit Fare Case Delay

Gregory Hankin, minority member of the Public Utilities Commission, yesterday said the commission should not "engage in fanciful protracted investigation" of the Capital Transit Co. rates while the public is being overcharged at the rate of $2,695,000 a year, which is more than $7000 a day.

He issued a prepared statement saying he noticed in the newspapers that PUC Chairman James H. Flanagan planned to issue a statement on "the many resolutions, petitions and motions for relief from alleged overcharges by the Capital Transit Co."

BARNABY By Crockett Johnson



. . . decorate each spit-roasted partridge with collops of foie gras and tartlets filled with roquefort whipped into cream sauce and Chinese date plums. Garnish with truffles and serve. . . . That takes care of Thursday.
Your folks may begin to tire of all this hearty peasant fare, so Friday's menu will be something really special! The creation that catapulted the name "O'Malley of the Waldorf" to the highest pinnacle of the culinary arts . . .
What a sensation when it first appeared on the carte du jour! Père Delmonico hurried over to clasp my hand! Old man Rector sulked! "Why," they heard him mutter, "didn't I think of it?"—
What was it, Mr. O'Malley?
Meat and potatoes!

Newcomers to Washington Are to Have Special Guidance in Locating Church of Their Choice, Plus Church Help in Solving Personal Problems

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The young woman's letter printed in your column of January 6, which commended the social program of a Chevy Chase church as "the friendliest and most inspiring I have ever found," prompts this message from the Washington Federation of Churches. We know there are thousands of newcomers to Washington who come from communities where the church was the center of their social life. We realize it is not easy for these people to find, in a strange community, the church of their choice.

Therefore, the Defense Commission of the Washington Federation of Churches has organized a Workers' Committee,—the main duty of which is to help the newcomer find his place in the church of his choice. The Workers' Committee is composed of all the full-time denominational counselors who have been assigned to Washington to work with Government warworkers and service personnel.

Also, the Defense Commission will soon issue a Church Guide,—listing the name, location, pastor, telephone number and time of service of all churches of every faith in the metropolitan area. This catalogue is being prepared under the direction of the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital; and will be given to individuals to keep. In addition, a Church Directory is being compiled, containing more complete listing of programs and services; and it will be available for reference at information desks and counselor offices. The Defense Commission of the Churches (a Community War Fund agency) will refer any inquiries to the proper denominational agencies. Persons wishing to locate the church of their choice may call DEcatur 3132 for information.

Commencing this week, and lasting through February 15, a course of study entitled, "How to Become a Real Person in a Confused World," is being conducted at Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw., each Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. This course includes discussion of personal problems facing young adults; and how to reach satisfactory decisions based on sound principles and philosophy. Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Church, is teaching the course. Other courses are being given at the church these same evenings, in a Christian School sponsored by the Federation's Committee on Christian Education. Of particular interest to young people is the course, "Preparation for Marriage," taught by Mrs. Gould Wickey, specialist and writer in the field of marriage and the home. Sincerely,

DONALD F. BAUTZ,
Director, D. C. C.

Property Owner's Side Of "Tenant" Grievance

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: As a woman past 70 years of age, I feel much sympathy with "F. E. M.," your correspondent of January 9, who is utterly discouraged about trying to give her two daughters a decent upbringing in Washington, after having struggled for eight years to keep the family's head above water, financially, here. She attributes her discouragement to the "exorbitantly high rentals" and real estate prices in and near the District, and points to the increase in juvenile delinquency in our public schools, a condition she blames on lack of decent housing at reasonable price, which (according to her) compels both parents to work to provide the necessities of life.—food, clothing, taxes and lodgings in a respectable neighborhood.

As I say, I feel much sympathy with "F. E. M.," who now believes she is confronted with the necessity of sending her daughters to private school, to protect their morals; and who asks despairingly, "But how can we do it?" However, I would remind her that juvenile delinquency is not confined to the public schools; but can also be found in more select and expensive institutions. And speaking of exorbitant rentals,—there are two sides to that grievance, too. For instance: Eighteen months ago I rented a freshly decorated 6-room bungalow to a young couple from New Jersey, the husband having come to the Government service the previous year. The rent was slightly less than $50 a month; the house modern; the grounds large, and everything as fresh and comfortable as thoughtful planning and decoration could make it. The floors had been freshly finished the year before, and left in excellent condition by a former tenant, after three years of occupancy.

High Rent Covers Replacement Costs

THE MAN was finally given the rank of captain in the War Department and transferred to Florida. They moved out of my house a week ago; and to my horror I found the place so scarred and filthy in every way that complete redecoration will be necessary before I can offer it to another tenant. This is one reason why property owners are obliged to get high rents, to protect themselves against abuse. I have sold two properties and am placing this one on the market, to avoid further loss like that just suffered.

AAUW to Honor India Nobleman

Sir Ramaswami Srinewasa Sarma of India will speak at a reception to be given in his honor by the American Association of University Women, Washington Branch, on January 19 at 8 p. m. instead of yesterday as announced.

He arrived in Washington yesterday and will be here for about three months.

Exercises Advocated To Improve Shape

(This is the second week of a special series by Ida Jean Kain for women who want to get in trim. Her schedules will help you reduce or gain weight and normalize your measurements.)

By Ida Jean Kain

It may take a bit of converting, but you can be a sweater girl. Your weight is quite a factor. A bust measurement that is too large is due to excess fat and this extra weight tends to pull the contour down.

If you are overweight, your method for improving the bust measurement is to cut calories to lower your weight to normal and to exercise to tone the muscles as the weight is lost. You cannot reduce the bust with exercise, but it is necessary for toning the muscles and improving the contour.

Of if you are too thin, you will have to build up your weight and vitality to normal. You will have to take exercise, not only to tone these particular muscles but all your muscles so that you are in better form generally.

Exercise is a normalizer and overweight or underweight, you benefit from the same kind. The breasts are supported by the pectoral muscles which spread fanwise across the chest and insert in the upper arms. The specific exercises for this measurement are performed with the arms at shoulder level or higher.

Arm-circling is excellent. Make big, backward circles from the shoulders, letting arms swing freely out in front, up, around and down in back. You may do this as many times as you please, because it's no strain. But you have to keep tabs on your posture.

Don't let the small of your back cave in or your head go forward as you circle backward. Finish with small circles. Hold your arms straight out at the sides, shoulder-level, hands closed into fists, but loosely. Again, circle backward by moving the shoulders. Ten counts will be enough.

The Gentler Sex

By Walrina Lindsay

The Expected Guest

I

How still, how new, and how unlived in is this room,
Done in its delicate pinks and blues,
With its light-hearted Mother Goose wall paper,
Catching up the radiant sunshine.
And yet it does not seem entirely empty,
Already the shadow of the approaching guest
Seems to hover gently.

II

Is everything all right, no minute need forgotten?
Will the little bed be soft, yet firm enough
For rest; will the sheets soothe, the blankets warm?
And yet not burden; will the lights give glow,
Not glare, for wondering puzzled eyes; will everything
Comfort, gladden, bring security and peace
To curious, uncertain stranger?

III

The highchair waits its restless occupant,
Filled is the chest of drawers for all demands,
Ready the white-backed toilet set, the sweet-scented
Oils and powders, the scales that will record
How much of growth each day brings, and contentment,
Here waits the chariot, silken lined; here also wait
The eager servitors.

IV

How will it seem when he is here, the room no longer empty?
What presence will he bring to it—
Or perchance she—this guest who's yet a stranger,
Except in our imaginings; what personality
Will spread itself to every nook and cranny,
And fill the house and even change the course
Of all our destinies?

V

How long will he abide here in this house, this room?
Forever? No! Two decades, little more and then away,
Setting up stakes, elsewhere—but until then,
Oh Room, give happiness, peace, privacy,
Joy in high moments, comfort in low,
Oh Room give of your best through all the years,
To him who comes!

Changes in Revolutionary Life Cycles Natural; Treatment Seldom Needed

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

Every human being, if it lives long enough, whether male or female, boy or girl, goes through one great revolutionary cyclic life change. It is called puberty.

Every female human being, if she lives long enough, goes through another cycle usually between the ages of 45 and 50—the menopause. Some males go through much the same thing.

In the first place it should be emphasized that these changes are perfectly natural. The life of every human being is conducted on three levels, not sharply separated but fused.

The first is the level of nutrition—eating food for maintenance, energy and growth. The second is reproduction of successor members of the species. The third is the intellectual and spiritual level that surrounds the life work in the world—your occupation, your skills, your intellectual and emotional enthusiasms.

Changes at Puberty

The life cycles we are discussing affect primarily the reproductive level, but also they profoundly disturb the intellectual and spiritual level.

Puberty is the period when a girl or a boy leaves off the golden age of childhood and begins to enter the age of manhood and womanhood. And nature signalizes this by dowering them with the ability to reproduce their kind.

To the girl the change is suddenly and dramatically ushered in by the onset of menstruation. The change comes more slowly to the boy. In both cases the fundamental change is the evolution of the essential reproductive organs.

But these changes are likely to be overshadowed in the changing individual by others. There is a rapid increase in growth—height and weight increase. At the age of 10 girls and boys are, on the average, about the same height. Between 10 and 14 the girls are a little taller than the boys. By the age of 15 the boys are taller than the girls and continue up to the age of 20 to maintain this increase.

The general contours and constitution of the body is determined at this time. Whether you are thin or heavy, tall or short, whether your lines tend to go up and down or side to side can be discerned.

The boy's voice changes to a deep, manly, but not always perfectly controlled note. He begins to wash his hands and face without prompting. His interest in neckties awakens.

Few Need Treatment

The girl suddenly acquires coquetry—the sidelong glances from under the drooped eyelids, the quick getaway or false escape whenever a boy near her age approaches. But why should I catalogue them for you, my experienced reader?

It being a perfectly natural process any treatment is usually unnecessary. Sometimes the girls need some extra iron. And very rarely some endocrine treatment may be indicated. One seldom sees any good results from endocrine treatment to increase height or reduce weight, but sometimes it works.

The only treatment I suggest is psychological. It is almost more than some people can bear not to tease these changelings. But try to refrain. They are suffering enough.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The child who is the oldest of the family has an enviable position which he should enjoy because of the privileges attached to it.

One can spoil the child's enthusiasm for being the oldest if the privileges do not keep pace with the responsibilities.

Mrs. W. C. thinks her nine-year-old is ready for some home tasks. "I also have a four-year-old, she writes. "The oldest is in bed by 8:30 but seldom sleeps until 9:30 or later. Since she was a baby, she has been high-strung and on the move every minute. I used to read stories to calm her before her bedtime. Now she reads them herself.

"I feel she should have some duties but have taken the easy road and have done them myself. I wish there were some way to get her to do small jobs without making them seem such a chore.

"She teases the younger girl and there is always a lot of arguing and quarreling. This is very upsetting to me. There is a bit of jealousy though we treat them exactly alike and my husband and I are not the argumentative type."

They Argue and Quarrel

You want to love both of them equally, but the older should be treated differently as befits her age difference. They are not twins so do not treat them as such. Put the younger to bed a half hour earlier. Allot tasks to both of them but the older should get the more complex ones because she is capable of performing them.

Both children might be more eager to do tasks if they weren't listed as "helping mother" Losing one's own work in that of another is not inspiring to a child.

Each job should be the child's own job, performed by herself and chosen by herself. Later she may have some of those jobs she isn't interested in but does as part of her obligations as a member of the family.

The quarreling cannot always be ended. Stay outside of it and let the children adjust their own differences. The younger will learn to parry the teasing and administer some of her own. If you take her part you arouse antagonism and jealousy.

Don't Act as Judge

When they get too noisy and quarrelsome separate them. Don't try to judge which one was "right." You can't do it fairly and you offer a seedbed for future quarrels when one child feels your judgment is biased. Quarreling may momentarily clear the air when forced arbitration might lead to masked but still active animosity between them.

For our leaflet, "Home Tasks as a Means of Building Responsibility," send a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope, to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of The Washington Post.

Strategy for Entertaining

By Grace Martin

Associated Press Feature Writer

If you are like most people, you will have your quota of visiting firemen this year.

And if you want them to leave as good friends as they were when they came, you'd better map some sort of general campaign.

In the first place, be definite. Don't drift along saying to your husband every few days, "Bill Jones' mother is going to be here next week, and I suppose we should do something about her." Make up your mind whether you should entertain her or not—and if so, how.

In the second place, let her know it on time. Don't wait till the day before she leaves and then telephone at 11 and ask if she can lunch with you.

In the third place, don't make your entertainment so elaborate that it puts a crimp in your budget for the next few weeks. Bill's mother will probably get just as much enjoyment out of a Sunday morning waffle breakfast as she will from an expensive dinner.

Finally, you might think of the things you would like to see and do if you were a stranger in town.

Too Much Blue in Room Offset By Effective Color Contrast

By Elizabeth M. Boykin

TOO TRUE BLUE—Most of us know the nuisance of moving into a rented place where the walls aren't what we'd have chosen and yet can't be changed. Mrs. D. W. L.'s headache was a living room that was much too blue.

The walls were painted a nice light blue which would have been all right had her rug not been French blue and if several pieces of her furniture hadn't had blue predominating in their coverings.

"Of course I know that very slick decorators can do all-blue rooms and get away with them," commented Mrs. L., "but my room looked awfully depressing. But after glooming around for a few weeks I thought of something that has turned all that blue into an asset.

"For draperies I chose a splashy figured cretonne with lots of wonderful rich wine red flowers in the design and used the same material to slip cover some of the furniture.

"Then I gathered together all the ruby red glass I had left over from a set I once had, bought a few new pieces in odd-and-end shops, picked up bits of china and ornaments with deep reds in the design, bought some big dramatic bird prints with rich dark red predominating. The result is a lovely room that looks as if it were planned that way in the first place, and all the family really enjoy it now."

KITCHEN PRIVILEGES—"Our kitchen is the most lived-in room in the house," writes Mrs. C. D. "I don't know what kind of people that's supposed to make us but we're as happy as if we had a brigade of butlers."

And why not, pray tell—for a kitchen can be a gracious and genial room. Mrs. D.'s kitchen certainly sounds like that kind—though it did start out as a problem room. For it wasn't as large as it should have been for the duty it was going to get. There wasn't enough storage space either.

The one asset was a bricked-in enclosure for the stove to set in which gave the room a provincial feeling that started the D. family on some decorative didoes that are delightful. The first thing was to fill in one wall with built-in cabinets with spacious working surfaces—the man of the family did a good job of these, making them in natural pine with yellow linoleum work tops.

This pine, by the way, with a good hardy finish protected further by wax, turned out to be entirely practical. The rest of the wall space was painted lemon yellow. The floor was covered in wood patterned linoleum. Curtains were of white dotted swiss.

A big trestle table with benches, also home-made by the man of the house, added further convenience and sociability—and on the practical side its top was also covered with yellow lineoleum.

Weddings

Margaret L. Yoder, D. L. Keys Are Wed

Angola, Ind., Jan. 12 (Spl.).—The First Congregational Church here this afternoon was the scene of a ceremony at which Miss Margaret Louise Yoder and Douglas L. Keys, jr., were married. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rollins Otis Yoder, while Mr. Keys is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Keys of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Rye Beach, N. H. The Rev. John Humfreys, who officiated at the wedding of the bride's parents in 1911, read the nuptial vows.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in ivory faille taffeta fashioned with a basque waist and a full skirt ending in a train. Her fingertip veil was held to her hair with a cluster of orange blossoms and she carried a white leather Bible to which was pinned a cluster of gardenias.

Miss Marjorie Anne Yoder, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor and only attendant. Robert Cummings, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, was the best man, and the ushers were Marion Hetzler Yoder and Imo Smith.

There was a reception following the ceremony, after which the couple left for a short honeymoon trip through the middle West. They will make their home in Brooklyn, N. Y.

The bride attended De Pauw University and until recently was assistant professor of English at Gallaudet College in Washington.

The bridegroom attended Polytechnic Institute in Brooklyn.

Fogarty—Schumann

Miss Barbara Jean Schumann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl J. Schumann of Brooklyn, was married Tuesday to Lieut. (j.g.) James W. Fogarty, U.S.N.R., son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Fogarty of Brooklyn. The ceremony took place at the Church of St. Saviour in Brooklyn, with the Rev. Nicholas Wangenfeld officiating.

The bride was graduated from St. Saviour Academy, Brooklyn, and from the Manhattanville College of the Sacred Heart. She received a master's degree from Fordham University's School of Social Service.

Lieutenant Fogarty was graduated from Brooklyn Preparatory School and from Fordham College. He also received a master's degree from Fordham University School of Social Service. He was formerly associated with the Juvenile Court of the District of Columbia.

Bridal attendants were Mrs. John H. Schumann and Miss Edna Fogarty. The best man was Ensign John Kearney and ushers were Capt. John H. Schumann and Capt. Frank Brown.

Keller—Moss

Now on a wedding trip in New York before making their home in Alexandria, Va., are Lieut. and Mrs. Philip Willis Keller, whose wedding took place recently in Alexandria.

The bride is the former Miss Elizabeth K. Moss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Churchill Moss. Lieutenant Keller is the son of Mrs. Henry J. Graham of Lakewood, Ohio, and the late John Shannon Keller.

St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church, Alexandria, was the scene of the late afternoon ceremony, January 7. The Rev. Albert T. Mollengen officiated at the ceremony.

Attired in a white satin gown with fitted bodice and full gathered skirt, the bride was given in marriage by her father. Her full length veil was caught with a coronet of pearls and she carried a bouquet of bride's roses.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Walter Judge, and serving the bride as maid of honor was Miss Anne H. Monroe.

Serving as best man was Capt. Deveaux Ravenel. Mrs. Keller attended the Farmville State Teachers College, and her husband is a graduate of Ohio State University.

Saks—Hertz

Mr. and Mrs. John D. Hertz of New York announce the marriage of their daughter, Leona Jane Hertz, to Julien M. Saks, son of Mrs. Louis Saks and the late Louis Saks of Birmingham, Ala.

The wedding took place yesterday at 5:30 in the cottage of Hampshire House in New York. Only members of the two families attended the ceremony, at which the Rev. Dr. Nathan A. Perilman officiated.

The bride was born in Chicago and attended the Faulkner School there. She has been a resident of New York City for several years.

Mr. Saks was born in Birmingham and is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania. He now lives in New York, but since the war has spent most of his time in Washington, where he is a business consultant with Klein & Saks. Immediately following the wedding, Mr. and Mrs. Saks left for Florida where they will remain for a month.

Send Valentine Greetings Now

It may seem rushing the seasons considerably when you notice that the stores just barely clear away the Christmas tinsel tables before they have set out the Valentine spread. But this war has speeded up even the holidays.

As a matter of fact, you who want to send those hearts-and-flowers Valentine greetings to the one and only have only until this Saturday, January 15, to get them mailed and on their way if you want them to be sure to arrive on the dot of February 14, St. Valentine's Day.

And just incidentally, remember to be sure to include "his" full name, his serial number, rank, organization, the APO number and the port of embarkation through which the mail is routed.

Lieut. Norton Goodwin, Air Ace, Wins Ninth Oak Leaf Cluster

By Elizabeth Henney

On his way back to his duties in the Air Corps is Lieut. Norton Goodwin, who has just completed a visit to his family in Washington after over a year's fighting in Tunisia and Italy. Son of Judge and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, he has just been awarded the ninth bronze Oak Leaf Cluster to his Air Medal, after 400 hours in the air on 50 missions.

He arrived back in Washington on Christmas Eve, just in time to join the family in their annual Christmas morning ride. It was a complete family get-together, for MacDonald Goodwin, the Goodwin's older son, was also with them; up from his duties as flight instructor in Camden, S. C.

It was a quiet young officer who returned from the North African theater of war, for Lieutenant Goodwin took no part in the Capital's round of holiday festivities.

After a year of war, he preferred the solitude of art galleries to bright lights and gay gatherings.

One other special pleasure during his trip was walking through the city. As he explained to his family, for the first time he realized how wonderful it was just to walk in a free country. He also noticed, during his stay here, how much more fully people seem to be conscious of the war than they were even a year ago.

Packs Bible First

That which struck Mrs. Goodwin as the most noticeable and powerful change in her youngest son was summed up in a simple phrase from the young man who, as a Harvard graduate cum laude, had left this country something of a skeptic. He said:

"We not only believe in God, all of us, but we live with Him daily when we fly."

And his Bible is the first item he packs when he travels.

Tall, blond, youthful-looking, Lieutenant Goodwin dislikes talking of his exploits, but an official communique "from an advanced air base in Italy," gives in the terse understatement of military phraseology, a powerful account of his exploits:

"Lieut. Norton Goodwin, Shoreham, Washington, co-pilot in a B-25 Mitchell bomber, recently completed his 50th mission.

"Lieutenant Goodwin flew over 10,000 miles in his bomber from a base in the United States to reach an operational base in North Africa. He started flying in combat on March 15, 1943, and since that time has flown through the best flak and fighter defenses the enemy could put up in the Mediterranean theater.

Early Raids Failed

"He encountered the fiercest fighter attack on the May 28 mission over a vital airdrome in Sicily where his formation was persistently attacked by more than 40 enemy fighters just before and after their bomb run. The target, however, was effectively hit, with many planes and installations hit. He saw the heaviest flak on July 14 over Messina, where the Germans had, at that time, concentrated practically all of their antiaircraft defenses in Sicily.

"Lieutenant Goodwin's steady and dependable piloting has been a strong factor in the successful tactics of the group's formations, which have consistently flown outstanding missions in this combat theater.

"He participated in such successful missions as the June 7 raid on Pantelleria, when seven to ten individual gun emplacements were knocked out; the September 2 bombing of a vital marshaling yard in central Italy, where the bombing was so successful that Major General Doolittle specially commended the group for its excellent bombing, and the September 24 raid on an important road bridge in central Italy.

"The skill required to hit this target may be illustrated by the fact that several other attempts had been made to smash the bridge, none of which were successful. Lieutenant Goodwin's formation hit it squarely, thereby cutting a vital line of communication for the Nazis.

"He has bombed targets in Tunisia, Sicily, Pantelleria, Sardinia, Italy, Greece and Corsica. He has flown over such historic places as the remains of old Carthage, Mount Vesuvius, the Isle of Capri and Mount Olympus in Greece. He also participated in the first bombing of the Rome area on July 19.

"He has earned the Air Medal with Oak Leaf clusters."

Women Rushing Into Vital Work Jobs Without Waiting For Labor Draft

WITH A WEATHER EYE slanted as to what their jobs may be when, and if, they are regimented for wartime work, a number of Washington women between the ages of 18 and 50—and certainly few of them will admit to being older than 50—yesterday were wondering whether they had better try to beat the draft to the draw.

Inquiries as to the need for nurses' aides poured into local hospitals all yesterday morning. Department store personnel managers who have found it difficult to keep enough saleswomen to handle business found plenty of applicants knocking at their office doors all day. Headquarters of the Red Cross and the American Women's Voluntary Services were swamped with calls from volunteers, and a local welfare agency that has been crying out its need for workers the past two years had its choice yesterday . . . for the first time since Pearl Harbor.

In other words, scores of Washington women are facing facts for the first time.

Aware at last that their services are needed, and needed badly, they aren't going to sit around and wait to be drafted. A good many of them feel they can do more in local welfare, or as nurses' aides, than as Rosie Riveters . . . and certainly there haven't been enough volunteer hospital helpers around this town in so long it's high time something happened.

"I'M WILLING TO DO something. I've wanted to do something for a long, long time—but what can I do?" wailed a prominent Washington woman yesterday.

Well, here are a few notes on volunteer needs that might interest her . . . or any other woman who wants to gird herself against the day when those men come home from the battle front and ask pointblank:

"And what have you been doing while we were fighting it out over there?"

(1) The Red Cross needs numerous workers in its camp and hospital division. Right now chief task on tap is the reconditioning, painting and upholstering of furniture. Untrained volunteers will be accepted, shown the ropes and put to work at once. Mrs. David Finley is in charge.

(2) The Washington Home for Incurables needs helpers with nursing experience—expecially for Sunday duty. Mrs. Theodore Wilkinson is chairman of the nursing committee and volunteers.

(3) The American Women's Voluntary Services has a list of 70 activities in which thousands of volunteers are desperately needed.

HUNDREDS OF AMBULANCE drivers are needed for Emergency and Casualty Hospitals and for the Navy relief ambulance, which is owned by the AWVS. There's a desperate need, also, for trained first-aiders.

Scores of child-care aides to assist professional workers are needed all over Washington, in nursery schools where mothers leave their children during working hours. The AWVS has a training center to prepare women for that activity.

The AWVS Motor Corps needs volunteers, and more volunteers, for its motor corps, which supplies drivers for the OSS, Army detail and the British Joint Staff Mission.

Women who have hestitated to volunteer for any type of wartime activity because they are untrained can use that excuse no longer . . . either for themselves or their men in uniform.

"We have a training school. Volunteers without preparation when they come to us will be trained and placed on duty somewhere," said a committee chairman at AWVS yesterday. Mrs. Robert Lovett, in charge of civilian protection activities of the organization, and Mrs. Arthur Krock, who manages duties in connection with the Navy Relief ambulance owned by the AWVS, can and will assure any would-be volunteer that her services are needed now as never before . . . particularly if she knows how to drive an automobile.

Nurses' aides for Washington hospitals are solicited through the Red Cross, but their work naturally requires training. Prepared helpers are also needed for the fingerprinting of school children—a measure that speeds identification in meeting delinquency problems. Women who can type, knit, sew, roll bandages, handle a switchboard, or take dictation are needed at the Red Cross and can be put to work at once.

The needs are obvious. Provisions for meeting them are available for every woman willing to do her part—now.

Let the draft-women-labor measure come as it may. Washington women won't wait for that.

Jerries, Japs All In Day's Work For Polish Ace

The realization of an aviator's too-good-to-be-true dream, that of getting a crack at both the Jerries and the Japs, has come to Maj. Witold Urbanowicz, Polish ace, who has shot down two Japanese Zeroes and dropped specially wrapped packages of TNT on the decks of 15 Japanese boats, the action taking place during the recent battle for Changteh.

Major Urbanowicz, who was assistant air attache at the Polish Embassy, left last fall to fly with the forces of Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault in China. It was just a few days ago that the Polish Embassy was trying to get word to the Polish flier that his wife had given birth to a son here.

Major Urbanowicz is soon to rejoin the Polish Air Force operating over Europe. In 1940, he was a member of the famous Polish Squadron 303.

Johnny May Talk In Arabic When He Comes Home

Theoretically, at least, Johnny should be a linguist when he comes marching home.

If he isn't it won't be the fault of the War Department. In a late bulletin, the Army announces the publication of yet another "Language Guide," designed as one of those blue-jacketed little booklets that are now familiar to hundreds of thousands of Yanks.

The new booklet, "North African Arabic," seeks to enable the American soldier to order a meal, ask directions or buy things in Morocco, Algeria, Tunisia, and Libya. In general it follows the plan of previous language guides by substituting phonetic pronunciation for the native spelling. Included are interpretations of most of the essential words and phrases likely to be used by soldiers in that part of the world.

Lieut. DeCourt Engaged to Wed Lieut. Nugent

Mrs. Julian DeCourt announces the engagement of her daughter, Lieut. Catherine Louise DeCourt, Army Nurse Corps, to Lieut. William F. Nugent, AUS.

Lieutenant Nugent is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard J. Nugent of Schenectady, N. Y. He attended the Union College at Schenectady and the University of Notre Dame. He is now at Camp Croft, S. C.

Lieutenant DeCourt attended Mount St. Agnes College, Washington, Md., and Mercy Hospital, Baltimore. She is now stationed at Walter Reed Hospital. The wedding will take place sometime in the spring.

Jewell—Edwards

The engagement of Miss Jean Jewell to Naval Aviation Cadet James Upshur Edwards was announced by Capt. Edmund Francis Jewell, USNR, and Mrs. Jewell of Manchester, N. H.

Captain Jewell, who is publisher and editor of the Union and Leader in Manchester, lived in Washington several years when he was advertising director and business manager of a local newspaper.

Cadet Edwards is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Upshur Edwards of Matoaca, Va. He was graduated from Randolph-Macon College in 1943, where he took his pre-medical course. Entering the service last July under the Navy V-5 program, he studied at Wesleyan University before going to Keene, N. H. He will leave in about two weeks for Chapel Hill, N. C. No date has been set for the wedding.

Nuland—Ames

Mrs. Raymond Louis Blais of Lodi, Calif., has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Martha Elma Nuland, to Mr. Milton Benjamin Ames, jr., of Norfolk, Va. and Washington, D. C., son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Benjamin Ames, of Norfolk.

Miss Nuland attended the College of the Pacific at Stockton, Calif.

Mr. Ames attended William and Mary College and was graduated from the Guggenheim School of Aeronautics at the Georgia School of Technology. The wedding date has been set for January 22.

Williams—Crockett

Mrs. Elwood Smith Williams of Colonial Beach, Va., announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Ada Mae Williams, to William Davis Crockett, USN, Medical Corps Reserve, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lee Crockett of Tangier, Va.

Miss Williams is now employed at the Naval Proving Ground, Dahlgren, Va.

Mr. Crockett, who is a graduate of the University of Virginia, is attending the Medical College of Virginia. Upon graduation he will be commissioned a lieutenant (j. g.) in the United States Naval Reserves.

The wedding will take place sometime in February.

Visits Grandmother

Lieut. Harry F. Stimpson, U.S. N.R. and Mrs. Stimpson, have arrived in Virginia from Quonsett Point, R. I., to visit her grandmother, Mrs. Richard E. Byrd, in Winchester. Lieutenant Stimpson has been taking a special course at Quonsett Point.

Underwood & Underwood

MISS ANNE MacGREGOR MOORE

whose engagement to Pvt. E. Harris Knight, USMC, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Wilson Knight of Akron, Ohio, has been announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Gardner Moore of Washington. No date has been set for the wedding

Visitors From Rio Grande Area Here

In Washington for a few days on official mission are Lawrence M. Lawson and Rafael Fernandez MacGregor, American and Mexican Commissioners, respectively, on the International Boundary Commission between the United States and Mexico.

These "diplomat - engineers" whose headquarters are at El Paso, Tex., for the American section and at Juarez, Mex.—its twin city across the Rio Grande—for the Mexican section, have among their many duties not only to examine and settle any boundary differences that might arise but also to direct and inspect engineering and sanitation projects on the boundary line and operate and maintain a number of international works. The Commission's jurisdiction extends from the Pacific to the Gulf of Mexico—over about 2000 miles.

Asked, during a recent visit at the Pan American Union, what the principal project of the Boundary Commission was at present, Mr. Lawson mentioned with pride the rectification of the Rio Grande in the El Paso-Juarex Valley for the straightening of the meandering river that serves as a boundary between the United States and Mexico.

Both Senor Fernandez MacGregor—who is accompanied by Senora de Fernandez MacGregor—and Mr. Lawson will be in Washington for another week. It is the first time that both American and Mexican commissioners are in the Capital at the same time!

Franklins Back After 12 Months In Jap Camp

Judge and Mrs. Cornell Franklin, recently returned from Shanghai on the exchange ship, Gripsholm, stopped in Washington yesterday to visit Mrs. Franklin's sister-in-law, Mrs. Cuthbert Chesterman Lee.

Judge and Mrs. Franklin were held in a Japanese concentration camp for nearly 12 months, before their release from enemy territory by the State Department's exchange program. Mrs. Franklin told friends who gathered at her suite at the Shoreham Hotel of her trying existence under Japanese militarism. Although the fare was not "too bad" she related, it was nothing to brag about. Her two homes were taken over by the Japanese, and all the furniture tagged to indicate Japanese possession. This was probably the hardest thing to take, according to Mrs. Franklin, who had to live several months with the white tags reminding her of Pearl Harbor, and the occupation of Shanghai.

Douse Plays 'Concerto Petite' By Saverino With Great Ease

By Ray C. B. Brown

Capt. William F. Santelmann conducts the U. S. Marine Band Orchestra on Wednesday night in Barracks Hall. Soloist: Kenneth Douse. Program: Overture to "Ruy Blas" (Mendelssohn), "Natchez-on-the-Hill" (Powell), "Prelude a l'Apres-midi d'un Faune" (Debussy), "Concerto Petite" for saxophone (Louis Saverino), "Invitation to the Dance" (Weber), "Peter and the Wolf" (Prokofiev).

Indefatigable Louis Saverino, who steadily writes military marches, songs and various compositions as a relaxation from his duties as a member of the United States Marine Band and Orchestra, lately dashed off a "Concerto Petite" for alto saxophone which had its first performance last evening at the orchestra's weekly concert in Barracks Hall. Petite in the sense that it is only five minutes short, the concerto is a tall order for any soloist who plays it, because the composer has put into it all the technical tricks that the instrument can do, and one that it is not supposed to be able to do extend its tessitura to an F in altissimo.

Kenneth Douse, for whom the concerto was written, played the solo part with a deceptive ease that speaks well for his virtuosity. The solo, with its bubbling roulades and fountainous scales, its lyrical passages and its soaring flights, is the essence of the piece, for the orchestra participates mostly in discordant and tempestuous blasts. In other words, the harmonic idiom is swing of the deepest dye and one would not be surprised to find the concerto shortly in the repertoire of the name bands.

Capt. William F. Santelmann surrounded the novelty with familiar works of the likable kind. There was the overture that versatile Mendelssohn turned out so deftly for a drama that disgusted him, Victor Hugo's "Ruy Blas"; John Powell's lively and invigorating treatment of three old fiddle tunes in "Natchez-on-the-Hill" and for contrast the sensuous dreaminess and estival languor of Debussy's prelude to Mallarme's "L'Apres-midi d'un Faune."

After the concerto came Felix Weingartner's excellent transcription of Weber's piano piece, "Invitation to the Dance," and Prokofiev's "Peter and the Wolf" with Dale Harphan as the narrator. Prokofiev was probably more surprised than anyone else when his amusing skit, designed to acquaint children with the timbres of orchestral instruments, turned out a best-seller in the adult market.

D. C. Officer, Once Decorated For Gallantry, Dies of Wounds

Lieut. Hugh D. Leidel, 1882 Columbia rd. nw., died of wounds received in action in the Southwest Pacific on November 22, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

LEIDEL

The 23-year-old Marine Corps officer had been decorated with the Silver Star for gallantry on Guadalcanal in November, 1942.

At that time, according to a Navy announcement, "in utter disregard of his own safety, Lieutenant Leidel, time and time again led his men up and over a ridge in the face of heavy Japanese machine-gun cross-fire, to inflict severe casualties on the enemy. So conspicuous was his courage," the citation said, "his actions inspired men from all sides to seek permission to accompany him on the next push."

For wounds received in that action he was awarded the Purple Heart. The company that he led received a presidential citation.

A native of St. Louis, Mo., Lieutenant Leidel moved to the District with his family about 10 years ago. He graduated from Eastern High School and was attending American University when he enlisted in the Marine Corps. Called to active duty in January 1942, he was commissioned the following April and was sent overseas in August.

Lieutenant Leidel is the son of Capt. Oscar Leidel, USN, overseas with the Supply Corps, and Mrs. Mary B. Leidel of the Columbia rd. address. A brother, Lieut. O. W. Leidel, jr., is stationed here with the Navy's Bureau of Supplies and Accounts after 15 months of sea duty, and a second brother, Lieut. John Leidel, an Annapolis graduate, is on duty in the Pacific.

Mental Treatment Can Reduce Suicide Rate, Psychiatrist Says

The suicide rate can be reduced by physicians more readily detecting mental depressions in their patients and prescribing effective remedies, Dr. Isadore Rodis, professor of psychiatry at Georgetown University, told 150 members of the District Medical Society last night.

Many persons become normally depressed for a few hours or a day without apparent cause and in such cases there is no cause for alarm, Dr. Rodis told the group. It is the cases of depression which extend over long periods that need attention, he said.

Among the outstanding symptoms of the depressions are insomnia, irregularity in personal habits and the loss of appetite for food, sex and everything else," Dr. Rodis continued.

The vast majority of persons suffering mental depressions will finally recover without the aid of a physician—if they don't commit suicide in the meantime, he said.

The electric shock treatment by which the patient is put into a convulsion by scientific application of treatment is probably the most sure-fire method of curing the depressions, Dr. Rodis said, but it doesn't prevent future attacks.

In 20 of 26 cases of depression treated in experiments at Georgetown Hospital the patients recovered completely, Dr. Rodis cited.

Lieut. Col. Martin A. Berezin of the Army Medical Corps, spoke to the gathering on his personal experiences with men who developed mental disorders during combat on Guadalcanal.

There were few cases of real insanity developed in the front line trenches during the fighting, he said, although a number of various mental disorders, most of them curable, were noted.

Bright Colors Predicted for Postwar Homes

Grand Rapids, Mich. (AP).—Postwar furniture will follow traditional lines, with innovations leaning chiefly to color and arrangement, the work of some of the Nation's leading designers indicated recently in a display sponsored by Grand Rapids Industries, a group of furniture manufacturers.

Wide use of plastics in colors and wood tones is indicated in the designs. Chairs built for comfort and tables with four legs straight to the floor predominated.

Bright colors—red, green, blue and yellow—were enhanced by neutral backgrounds. Joseph Platt, designer of sets for "Gone With the Wind," showed bedroom furniture varnished in turquoise, royal blue and red against neutral walls, drapes and spreads.

A bedroom designed by Mademoiselle Magazine for teen-age twin girls was simply done in green and black plaid and included individual bulletin boards over each bed to satisfy the pin-up urge.

Adrian J. Neil, New York, designed a combination library-dining room to conserve living space.

Functional Dining Table

F. G. Burdorf, Louisville, Ky., displayed a glass and aluminum dining table in sections, which may be separated to form occasional and wall tables.

Paul Bry, New York, designed an oblong table divided down the center. When placed end-to-end against the wall, the sections are a long console table; together they form a dining table, and in V-shape a conference board for group meetings.

District Women Set Bond Goal At 30 Millions

Women's division volunteers of the D. C. War Finance Committee were charged with raising 30 million dollars in "E" bonds in the Fourth War Loan drive, at their kickoff luncheon in the Hotel Mayflower yesterday, as the campaign for 95 million dollars to be raised between January 18 and February 15 gained momentum.

MYERS

A million dollars of the District quota will be sought by local American Legion posts and auxiliaries, it was disclosed last night at a bond organization session in legion headquarters. Ed Hayes, past national commander, urged members of the D. C. department to convert their earnings into war weapons, with generous contributions to the campaign.

War bond rallies slated for today include:

District liquor dealers' organization luncheon, 12:30 p. m., Washington Hotel; Kiwanis Club luncheon, 12:30 p. m., Mayflower Hotel; Cosmopolitan Club luncheon, 12:30 p. m., Washington Hotel; Eastern High School, 9:30 a. m., and Retail Clerks Union Local No. 639 A, 1003 K st. nw., 8:30 p. m.

At the precampaign meeting of women's division workers yesterday, Mrs. Howard G. Nichols, chairman, commented that women have been called the "spenders" of the Nation but that they now have "the opportunity to be the savers of the Nation," as she called for all-out assistance in putting over their part in the drive which opens here next Tuesday.

SIDDONS

A total of at least 95 million dollars must be raised locally, Campaign Chairman John A. Reilly reiterated, pointing out graphically that the District's quota in the Nation-wide drive would alone have been spent in the war before the end of the day.

Chairman Reilly outlined three of the Fourth War Loan drive objectives: successful prosecution of the war, attainment of postwar aims and maintenance of economic stability. Other speakers were Miss Harriot Elliott, assistant field director of the National War Finance Committee in charge of women's activities, and Mrs. Elena Kohler, Red Cross worker who has set up clubs for American servicemen overseas.

War bond rallies also were held yesterday by the North Randle Highlands Citizens Association, Banneker Junior High School faculty and members of Local No. 209, Pastry Cooks and Kitchen Help Employes.

Rotary's Head Views Russia As Competitor

American business will face stiff competition from Russia and from those countries which may adopt national socialism during the postwar period, according to Charles L. Wheeler of San Francisco, president of Rotary International, who spoke yesterday before a meeting of Rotary district governors at the Willard Hotel.

Wheeler told his listeners that it would tax every ounce of ingenuity which the American businessman possesses to meet the competition, and warned that as a result of postwar economics, profits to American business would be greatly reduced.

Wheeler said this country was on the verge of communism when Marshal Stalin called an end to the international comintern.

"After the passage of the Volstead Act the bootleggers went into the unions and later the 'commissars' went into our schools and other educational bodies. It was a nip-and-tuck fight we were having with communism before Stalin called off the Third International," Wheeler said, and added that: "In my State they even elected a Governor and other State officials."

Among those present at the meeting yesterday were Clinton P. Anderson and Almon Roth, both past presidents of Rotary International, and Albert S. Schmidt, governor of the 180th district. Past district governors present were: Roy Danzer, Ignatius Bjorlee, Oliver Short, Thomas Bess, Chester J. Langdon and Joseph S. Merritt.

DONALD DUCK — By Walt Disney

NO! DOGGONE THING MUST BE BURNED OU—WOOPS! DOGGONE... KNOCKED SOMETHING OVER!
THUD!
GUESS, YOU'LL HAVE T' GET OUT OF BED AND TURN ON THE CEILING LIGHT AT THE WALL SWITCH, HUH?
OH, YEAH? AND STUMBLE AROUND KNOCKIN' SOMETHIN' ELSE OVER!
WHY NOT FEEL YOUR WAY ALONG THE WALL, UNCA DONALD?
SAY, THAT'S A GOOD IDEA! I'LL DO IT!

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Nonstrop Flier — By Milton Caniff

I'M NOT A VERY GOOD HOST, TERRY! CAPTAIN MIDI IS QUARTERED HERE WITH US DURING THE QUARANTINE - AND I TOSS HIS KIT ON THE FLOOR!
IT GLANCED OFF HIS BUNK... -HERE, PETE, I'LL HELP YOU PICK UP THE STUFF!
HMM - I MUST SAY OL' MIDI DOES OKAY ON THE TOILET ARTICLES...
YEAH - SOME SWEET-SMELLIN' STUFF.. IT'S LIKE READING SOMEONE'S MAIL GOING THROUGH A GUY'S JUNK THIS WAY...
I GUESS WE PICKED UP MOST EVERYTHING... DID YOU GET HIS RAZOR?
NO - I DIDN'T SEE A RAZOR...
NEITHER DID I... FUNNY! HIS HOUSE BOY WOULD FORGET HIS BOSS' RAZOR!
HOLY SMOKE! THAT'S IT!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

NOW TELL ME, GYPSY -- WHY WERE YOU RUNNING AWAY THE DAY I MET YOU ON THE TRAIN?
WELL -- LAST MONTH, WHILE I WAS DANCING AT THE TERRACE GARDEN CLUB, SOMEBODY CRACKED THE OFFICE CRIB FOR SIX G'S -- STOLE $6000, THAT IS!
"THAT NIGHT I CAME DOWN TO CHANGE BETWEEN NUMBERS AND FOUND FIVE C-NOTES -- $100 BILLS IN MY MAKE-UP BOX!"
"WHILE I WAS STANDIN' THERE HOLDIN' THE DOUGH, ALL BUG-EYED, IN WALKS OSCAR, THE HEAD WAITER! HE ACCUSED ME OF LIFTIN' THE MONEY, AN' LAUGHED LIKE A HORSE WHEN I DENIED IT!"
"LOOK," HE SAYS -- "YOU'RE TOO PRETTY TO END UP IN THE BIG HOUSE! TAKE A POWDER, AN' I'LL COVER FOR YOU!" -- I WAS ALL RATTLED, AN' LIKE A CHUMP, I BLEW TOWN!
AND GAVE THAT THIEVING HEAD WAITER A PERFECT ALIBI! OH, GYPSY! DON'T YOU SEE? HE WAS THE GUILTY ONE!

MICKEY FINN — Ex-Superman — By Lank Leonard

I WANT TO GIVE A COUPLE OF QUARTS OF MY BLOOD!
WELL, YOU CERTAINLY ARE GENEROUS! OVER HERE, PLEASE!
I-IS T-THIS I-IT, DOCTOR?
NO—NOT YET! I'M JUST GOING TO PRICK YOUR FINGER WITH THIS NEEDLE — TO GET A FEW DROPS FOR A TEST!
HE'S NOT GOING TO GIVE ANY — IN FACT, WE MAY HAVE TO GIVE HIM SOME!

MR. AND MRS. — An Expert in History — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

SEE IF YOU CAN ANSWER THIS ONE: WHAT AMERICAN GENERAL CROSSED THE DELAWARE?
THAT'S EASY. WASHINGTON
AND WHOSE LIFE WAS SAVED BY POCAHONTAS?
CINCH. CAPTAIN JOHN SMITH'S
DO YOU KNOW WHAT ROCK MARKS THE LANDING OF THE PILGRIM FATHERS?
PLYMOUTH ROCK. TAKE IT AWAY!
I'M NOT DOING SO BAD, AM I?
NO. THESE ARE QUESTIONS DESIGNED FOR CHILDREN OF FIVE YEARS

DIXIE DUGAN — One Way — By J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

NOW I'VE GOT TO GET MRS. HACKETT'S SIGNATURE ON THIS OPTION
Dear Dixie Dugan — I hereby place my entire wealth and properties in your hands for a period of 60 days. No transactions entered by me during this period will be valid. signed
I KNOW SHE WON'T DO IT WILLINGLY SO I'LL HAVE TO TRICK HER INTO IT
THERE'S ONLY ONE WAY IT CAN BE DONE — IF IT DOESN'T WORK, I'M SUNK —

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Now or Never — By Frank Martinek

YOU WERE SAVED AND YET COULDN'T LEAVE?
YES, COMMANDER! WE STAYED ON THE WATER ALL THAT AFTERNOON AND NIGHT!
THE PLANE WEATHERCOCKED INTO THE WIND AND THE SWELLS HIT THE WING FLOATS FROM SIDE TO SIDE
IF IT WEREN'T FOR THOSE AIRCRAFT ENGINEERS WHO BUILT THIS BABY WE'D BE DOWN IN DAVEY JONES' LOCKER!
AT DAWN AUGUST 4TH THE NAVIGATOR REPORTED WE WERE ONE HUNDRED MILES SOUTH OF THE ENEMY AIR BASE AT KAHILI
WE'RE PRETTY CLOSE TO THE NIPS, SKIPPER! HERE'S OUR POSITION!
MEN, WE'VE GOT TO TAKE A CHANCE! SHALL WE TRY IT?
YES!!
LIEUTENANT HAMBLIN FELT WE HAD A FIFTY-FIFTY CHANCE. IF THE TAKE-OFF FAILED WE WOULD BE IN THE WATER THAT MUCH SOONER
UPSY DAISY! HERE WE GO!

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — By Saunders and Woggon

RIGHT AROUND HOME — By Dudley Fisher

LOOK, MOM! WE'RE PLAYING LEAP FROG!
I WONDER JUST HOW THE OLD PAPA FROG IS SUPPOSED TO GET UP AGAIN.
IT OUGHT TO BE IN HERE!
THIS IS MY NATURE BOOK AND IT TELLS ALL ABOUT FROGS!

JOE PALOOKA — Jerrys Strategy — By Ham Fisher

JANE ARDEN — Check-up — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

JANE SMELLED PERFUME ON HI'S CLOTHES — THE SAME PERFUME THAT WAS SPILLED IN WANDA LOTT'S ROOM
LISTEN, WANDA — HAVE YOU GOT ANY MORE PERFUME LIKE THAT WE SPILLED?
GOOD — PUT A BOTTLE OF IT IN MY ROOM — QUICK — AND STAY OUT OF SIGHT — GET IT?
WHEW — THAT WAS A CLOSE CALL — BUT NOW I'M READY FOR 'EM!
IT WON'T TAKE LONG TO CHECK UP — IT'S RATHER UNUSUAL IF HI USES THE SAME EXPENSIVE PERFUME THAT WANDA DID WELL I'LL BE — HERE IT IS — THE VERY SAME STUFF!
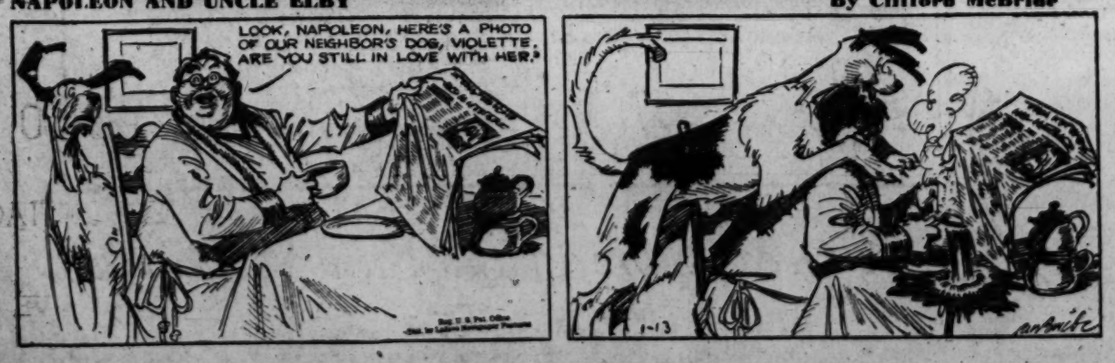
IT LOOKS AS IF HI WAS TELLING THE TRUTH!

SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

DO YOU MEAN TO SHINE THERE AND TELL ME THAT YOU PULLED ALL THOSE ELEVATORS UP HERE JUST BECAUSE YOU'RE LONELY?
Y-YES...
POOR MR. MOON! HOW SAD!
IT'S SAD, ALL RIGHT! BUT, MR. MOON, DO YOU REALIZE WHAT YOU'VE DONE?
TAKEN ALL THOSE PEOPLE AWAY FROM THEIR FAMILIES... MADE ANXIOUS HUSBANDS AT HOME WORRY... ANGUISHED WIVES GRIEVE... MOTHERS...
NO, NO! DON'T SAY ANY MORE! OH, HOW COULD I HAVE DONE SUCH A TERRIBLE THING!

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — By Clifford McBride



WINNIE WINKLE — Female Mail — By Branner

WE SHALL GO NOW, MAM'SELLE YVETTE! -- BUT I SHALL RETURN LATER -- AND NOT TO SEEK FOR HERR SCHLICK, EH?
HERR LIEUTENANT! LOOK! POTATOES!
ACH! WILL THESE PEASANTS NEVER LEARN THAT THEY CANNOT HOARD FOOD? CARRY THEM DOWN TO THE OFFICERS' KITCHEN, HANS!
NO! NO!.. PLEASE!! TOMORROW I SHALL BRING YOU MANY..!
FOOL! LET GO!!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED — By Zane Grey

I'VE BEEN ASKED NOT TO KNIT ANY MORE! WHAT AM I GONNA DO FOR TH' BOYS OVER THERE, NOW?
WHAT THOSE BOYS WANT, MORE THAN ANYTHING IN THE WORLD - IS MAIL!! LETTERS FROM HOME!!
DO Y'MEAN THEM THERE V MAIL LETTERS?
THAT'S RIGHT, DAISY!
GOSH, WINNIE -- I'D LOVE TO DO THAT -- ONLY I CAN'T WRITE SO SMALL!
ALL RIGHT, ZERO, TELL MY FORTUNE.. I'VE NOTHING TO HIDE!
NOTHING, Dr. GAMMA, BUT YOUR CAREER, AS THE 'GLOWING GHOST'!
I'M SURE PROFESSOR ZERO CAN TELL US MORE ABOUT THE 'GLOWING GHOST' THAN I KNOW, KING!
YOU'LL BE SURPRISED, DISTINGUISHED DOCTOR!

THE HECHT CO. AND THE SATURDAY EVENING POST PRESENT—

A Tribute to The Unconquerables

Prelude to The 4th War Loan . . . in Dramatic, Colorful Display . . . Honoring The Valiant People of Norway, Poland, Greece, Czechoslovakia, The Netherlands, France, Belgium, Yugoslavia, Luxembourg and Denmark

"Keep Backing the Attack!" With these fighting words, the U. S. Treasury opens the Fourth War Loan on January 18th. As a fitting prelude up to and into this great Victory effort, The Hecht Co. is privileged to present a Tribute to the Unconquerables . . . a Nation-wide War Bond Drive, co-sponsored by the Saturday Evening Post, and now in progress. This coast-to-coast drive is sponsored by Poet Joseph Auslander's magnificent Open Letters to the Unconquerables, which millions have recently read in the Saturday Evening Post. Auslander's letters have brought home to the people of this Nation the vivid, stark picture of the sacrifices made by tens of millions in the ravaged, war-torn lands. And the purpose of this drive, and the Fourth War Loan, is to impress our people with the great need for sacrifice now . . . to keep the attack rolling . . . to release these nations to fight . . . to speed final Victory for all.

SEE THE WINDOWS OF "THE UNCONQUERABLES"

SEE . . . The Dramatic Story of Greece picturing the valiant spirit of a submerged but unconquerable people.

SEE . . . The Facts About Ravaged Poland and what the reign of a Nazi tyranny has done to a nation bathed in blood.

SEE . . . The Heroic Stand of Norway, the vivid evidence of our indomitable people who fight on and on.

SEE . . . The "Czechoslovaks Carry On!" The underground activities of the Czechs, in the face of Nazi barbarism and brutality.

SEE . . . A Tribute to The Netherlands and how the Fighting Dutch fight on for Victory against the overwhelming forces of Hitler.

FREE TO BOND-BUYERS AT THE HECHT CO. THIS WEEK

1. A set of five full-color prints of Joseph Auslander's Open Letters to the Unconquerables will be presented to each purchaser of a $25 War Bond or more.

2. By special arrangement with the Ambassadors of Greece, Poland, Norway, Czechoslovakia and The Netherlands . . . important and interesting literature describing the various occupied countries will be presented to each purchaser of a $25 War Bond or More.

3. Each Bond buyer will receive free, a folder giving a biographical sketch of Joseph Auslander, and the story of how the Open Letters to the Unconquerables came to be written.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE HECHT CO. FROM THE AMBASSADOR OF NORWAY:

Norwegian Embassy
Washington D. C.
December 12, 1943

Mr. C. B. Dulcan, Sr.
The Hecht Company
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Dulcan:

Faith in ourselves, and faith in those with whom we fight, are as essential to victory as guns and bullets.

Tribute to the Unconquerables exemplifies the faith between Americans and Norwegians. You have our sincere thanks for your part in this tribute.

Sincerely,

W. Morgenstierne

Ambassador of Norway
